Enrolment down in county schools board learns

The number of students attending Haliburton County schools continues to decline, but there are indications the trend may be about to stabilize at the Kindergarten level.

September 30 enrolment figures presented to the Haliburton County Board of Education last Tuesday night show a general drop in enrolment in almost all county schools compared to last year. But census figures also presented at the meeting show that Kindergarten enrolment should remain relatively constant over the next few years at least, a trend that eventually will result in a more stable enrolment in the school system.

Total enrolment was down to 1933 students this year from 1997 on September 30, 1979. In 1976 2,254 students were attending county schools.

Enrolment at Archie Stouffer elementary school was 410.5 at the end of last month compared to 431.5 last year. (The decimals occur because Kindergarten students who attend only half days are counted as half students for grant purposes).

In 1976, there were 511 students at the school and in 1972, enrolment stood at 528.

The number of youngsters attending Cardiff elementary school was also down on September 30 this year, when enrolment stood at 94 compared to 100.5 last year. The school had 130 students in 1976, and 162 in 1972.

Dorset elementary school showed the least decline this year at 50.5 students were registered, compared to 51 students last year. In 1976 there were 74 students at the school and in 1972 there were 101.

Enrolment at Gooderham school was also down slightly, to 37 compared to 38.5 last year. Enrolment at Gooderham varied only slightly over the last eight years. In 1976 there were 37 students at the school and in 1972 there were 44.

Haliburton Highlands Senior Elementary school had nine fewer students at the end of September this year than at the same time last year. Total enrolment stood at 473 compared to 482 in 1979. In 1976, there were 496 students at the school.

Enrolment was also down slightly at Victoria Street elementary school, standing at 212.5 on September 30 compared to 215.5 at the same time last year. In 1976, the school had 245 students.

Enrolment at Wilberforce elementary school was 44.5 this year compared to 49 last year. There were 80 students at the school in 1976, but a substantial drop in enrolment occurred in 1978-79 when a Grade 5 class was moved to the senior elementary school.

Total enrolment in the public schools stood at 1322 on September 30 compared to 1368 last year and 1573 in 1976.

There were also fewer

Would act as consultant on art programs

Board to share cost of curator

Art programs in county schools are expected to get a boost under a tentative agreement between the Haliburton County Board of Education and the Haliburton Highlands Guild of Fine Arts.

At a meeting last Tuesday, the board agreed to pay one quarter of the salary of a curator for the Rails' End Station Gallery. In return, the curator will act as a consultant to the board, coaching teachers in techniques of art instruction and arranging shows at the gallery which will complement courses offered in the schools.

The decision to enter into the cost sharing arrangement came following a presentation from Guild member Carol Finn.

Finn told the board that under the present system, students have little opportunity to express themselves creatively and to work through problems to individual solutions. She stressed that the importance of an art program centres on its potential to develop the creative aspect of students' minds.

Finn said the Gallery had reached the point where volunteer help was stretched to the limit, and that a curator would be expected to take over the full responsibility for arranging shows at the facility. Many of those shows could complement school courses in timing and content, she told the board. As well, the curator could act as a consultant to teachers and students, and could coordinate an "artist in the schools" program, something which had been tried before in Haliburton County and criticized because of what Finn said was a lack of both lead up and follow up.

"There are many ways that the proper person can make a contribution to art education in the school system," she said.

Initial plans call for the curator to be hired on a five-month trial basis, from January to June, 1981. Finn estimated the curator would require a salary of between $20,000 and $24,000 which she said is not a large sum "considering the qualifications that person will have to have."

"We would hope that you (the board) would share some part of that salary," Finn said. She asked the board to consider providing $3000 for the five-month trial period and up to $6000 if the curator is subsequently hired on a one-year contract.

While the board was receptive to the idea, several members were concerned about ensuring that the school system got a reasonable return for its contribution.

Director of Education J. Douglas Hodgson said the board would have to make use of the curator one and a half days a week to justify the financial commitment they

Experience key for trustees Monmouth incumbent says

by Sue Cooper

The incumbent school trustee for Monmouth Township told residents that if elected, he would be named chairman of the Haliburton County Board of Education in the next term. Ross Anderson who presently acts as vice-chairman on the board, is next in line for the chairmanship.

At a meet the candidates night, last Thursday, Anderson, a 10-year veteran of the Haliburton County Board of Education, said it was important to have an experienced person on the board since he would know who to solicit for support and when and where to solicit that support before an important vote might be made by the board.

But his opponent in the municipal election for school trustee, Jean Thomas, told the crowd that experience on the board was not necessarily a candidate's most important quality since even Anderson had to be a newcomer to the board at one time.

In his speech to the audience gathered in the Lloyd Watson Memorial Centre in Wilberforce, Anderson said he felt he could take credit for the Wilberforce school being open since he fought to keep it that way. He explained that he had tried to keep the grade five students at the school but because of the lack of a French language teacher the students had to be bused to Haliburton to partake in the mandatory French classes.

Anderson said that in his term of office, he had supported the bus drivers and had helped establish and re-arrange routes for the buses to travel.

Also, Anderson said he had been mainly responsible for the dental coach program in the Wilberforce school. In this program, dentists travel to the school to give the children check-ups and suggest work that might need to be done.

However, in her speech which followed Anderson's, Thomas said she had been surprised to learn that many people in the township were unaware of who their trustee was.

After visiting with people in the area, Thomas said she realized there was a need for more communication with the board and the people as well as the school. Thomas said she feels well acquainted with the needs of the school since she acted as secretary for five years. She was forced to resign her position if she wished to run for school trustee.

If elected, Thomas said she would try to visit the school twice a month to discuss matters important to the school and the board.

Thomas told the crowd that she did not agree with long bus trips for children, especially when they were being taken away from a school where there were already empty classrooms.

Thomas said she was concerned about the possibility of closing the schools in the small areas.

"I believe children are better in a small school near their home," Thomas said.

One candidate for council, Barry Dunford also touched on the topic of school closure in his opening speech. He told the crowd that he felt the schools should be kept open in the smaller centres if it was possible.

Dunford, who works as the assistant park superintendent in Silent Lake Provincial Park, told area residents that he was interested in the municipality and also felt Tory Hill should have representatives on the council.

He said the community was fortunate to have excellent recreational facilities and also the modern library.

"Show you care by voting," Dunford told the Monmouth ratepayers.

Harry Clark, also a candidate in this election, ran last election but both he and Dunford were defeated in their bid for council.

Clark told the audience that he had not come to find fault with any members of the Issues outlined at all candidates meeting

Dysart contest between experience, 'new blood'

The battle lines that were drawn at an all candidates meeting in Haliburton Monday night indicate that voters in Dysart et al will face some tough choices Monday. For while all candidates sessions in some of the county's municipalities have been sleepy affairs, the Dysart session was characterized by forceful rhetoric and the juxtaposition of youth, experience and ideas.

More than 60 people were on hand to listen to short speeches from incumbents and hopefuls and to ask questions about topics of concern.

First to speak were the five candidates vying for four seats on the Board of Education.

Earl Cooper, who has spent four years on the board, said his main concerns of "communication and understanding" have not changed. He welcomed the parents association now in its formative stages, noting that it could be a vehicle through which the board, parents and teachers could question each other in a better way.

Len Salvatori, who has served on the board since its inception and was chairman this year, noted that he has tried to put younger board members in charge of committees to give them more experience.

He expressed confidence in the idea of the board, noting that "it functions well in every part of the county."

Costs are an ongoing concern both of the board and the public, Salvatori said, noting that costs all continue to rise as grants from the province fall and an increasing number of teachers reach maximum salary.

Overall, he said, the system "is adequate", although he acknowledged that it is weak in some areas.

In the future, he said, the board must continue to watch costs closely while still providing the best possible education for the county's children.

Derrell Stamp, who is seeking his second term on the board, outlined some of the major decisions the group has been called on to make over the past two years, and noted that the implementation of Bill 82 would place additional requirements on the system which the board must be responsive to, particularly in the area of special education.

Stamp also expressed support for the parents group concept, and advocated the formation of a teacher/board committee to give teachers a greater say in the decision making process.

Nancy Stinson, the fourth incumbent seeking a board seat, maintained that "experience is the key asset in any job." She noted that she has served on the transportation committee and as chairman of the advisory committee for the mentally retarded.

Stinson said she would like to continue working for a better education system in the county, and invited the public to attend board meetings to see how decisions are made.

Hoping to defeat one of the incumbents is Blanche Turner, who is presently employed as an employment counsellor with Sir Sandford Fleming College.

One of Turner's main concerns is the problem faced by learning disabled or gifted children in the present system, who she said, are not getting the services they require.

She said a professional

Glamorgan, Cardiff are exceptions

Light turnout at most polls

Voter turnout was generally lighter in advance polls held throughout the county Saturday than at similar polls in 1978.

The only exceptions were in Cardiff, where seven candidates are trying for three council seats, and in Glamorgan, where a proposed community centre has voters and candidates lining up for and against.

In Cardiff, 182 people cast votes compared to 124 in 1978. In Glamorgan, the turnout was up more than 600 percent, as 210 people cast their ballots compared to 35 in 1978.

In Dysart the turnout was just about the same as in 1978. A total of 181 ballots were cast in Haliburton Village and 11 at the other advance poll in Harcourt, while in 1978, 199 people voted in Haliburton and 16 in Harcourt.

Voting was down substantially at the advance poll in Lutterworth, where 127 people turned out compared to 377 in 1978.

Some 47 people cast ballots in Monmouth Saturday and that number is about the same as in 1978, clerk Sharon Hunter said.

The turnout was also down substantially in Stanhope, where 87 people voted Saturday compared to 195 in 1978. Two advance polls are being held this year, however, while only one was held last time.

Turnout was also lighter in Snowdon as 51 people cast ballots compared to 118 in 1978.

In Galway/Cavendish, 206 votes were cast in polls in the townships compared to 297 in 1978.

Those who did not vote at the advance polls will have a chance to cast their ballots on election day this coming Monday.

Incumbents and hopefuls had a chance to discuss the issues with Dysart et al, voters Monday night at an all candidates meeting. A small number of ratepayers were on hand to hear the platforms of those speaking election to council and the school board on Monday.

Spending, roads main issues in Snowdon

An over expenditure to repair a bridge in Snowdon was one of two main concerns when that township held its all candidates meeting last Wednesday. The second was the condition of the Irondale Road, a problem which crops up at every election.

Reeve Bob Vick came under fire from some of the ratepayers over problems associated with repairs to the bridge carried out this year. Tender prices were higher than expected, he said, and as a result, council was forced to spend some $20,000 more than it had budgeted. But he made it clear that the bulk of the money would come back to the township from the Ministry of Transportation and Communications in the form of a supplementary grant next year.

Clerk Geoff Wynne told the meeting that the subsidy rate should be 80 percent. He said the extra expenditure for the repairs came about because the lowest tender came in at $81,000. Council had estimated the work would cost $67,000. Engineering fees took another $7,500. Wynne said, and because the condition of the bridge was worse than expected, more work had to be done to repair the structure than had been called for in the tender specifications.

Money to cover the extra costs came from the reserve for current road work, he said. In response to a question from the audience, he admitted that the township would temporarily be in a deficit position by the end of the current year.

Board to share cost of therapist

The Haliburton County Board of Education has agreed to pay a portion of the cost of a full time speech therapist.

At a meeting last Tuesday, the board voted to contribute 3/10ths of the estimated $23,000 salary and related expenses of the therapist. Balance of the funding will come from the home care division of the Ministry of Community and Social Services and from the Haliburton and District Association for the Mentally Retarded.

The therapist is expected to spend one and a half days a week acting as a consultant to the board, diagnosing students' speech problems and instructing teachers in ongoing individual therapy programs. He or she will also spend two and a half days a week working in the home care program to rehabilitate stroke victims and one day a week working with the mentally retarded at the Lakeview Centre in Haliburton Village. The board will provide office space and supplies, secretarial services and a telephone for the therapist, services valued at $3000 according to the preliminary budget outlined in a written report to the board from trustee Marilyn Kinsman. Costs of the office space and services will be charged back to the other agencies on a present council but rather wished to be involved in the municipal decision making.

"I'll do my best to co-operate" with the council if elected, Clark said.

The only other new candidate running for election was Reg Schofield who feels that council will need a member of the historical board at its table since 1981 is the centennial year.

"It would be nice" if a member of the historical committee was elected to council, Schofield said. He told ratepayers that he had served on Monmouth council for 10 years, previously, as well as the public school board and now acts on the volunteer fire department.

The only incumbent council member to put his name forward for re-election this time was Alan Revill.

Revill began his speech by making mention of the committees on which he had served during his term in office. He noted that cemeteries in the township were being kept in excellent shape. He also told the crowd the recreation committee was very successful with the events which it has been sponsoring during the year.

"I'm very proud of the recreation facilities we have here," Revill said.

But while commending the community on the fine facilities, Revill noted most of the credit must go to past councils and committees.

One issue which Revill touched on in his opening speech sparked some questions from the audience.

Revill mentioned the problems which had plagued the residents along the South Wilberforce Road. Presently because one bridge is unsuitable to use, residents must travel an extra four to five miles to get to the hamlet.

When council last approached the Ministry of Transportation about repairing the bridge, Revill said the construction was estimated to cost $95,000 but since the ministry refused to offer the usual 80 percent subsidy, the township would be forced to bear the total cost itself.

"I don't feel it feasible for all the ratepayers to pay for a bridge for those (people) in that area," Revill said.

After being questioned about the road, Revill said it was not feasible for the township to replace the bridge with the province's 80 percent subsidy. He said the township had looked into the possibility of installing a culvert instead of a bridge but was turned down since it would block a navigable waterway.

Although they both received acclamations, reeve Keith Tallman and his deputy reeve Carman Coumbs gave brief speeches at the candidates meeting.

Tallman outlined the advances the township had made in the past two years, including tennis courts, a dog park, and the continuation of the Ontario Home Renewal program in the township.

Coumbs urged all ratepayers to play an active role in the municipality and noted that there was something for everybody to enjoy in Monmouth.

He commended the recreation committee and also mentioned that the road system seems to be improving while taxes have not been increased.

A handmade quilt and a handmade afghan were raffled off at the Haliburton senior citizens club bazaar Saturday at the Dysart arena.

Curator would act as consultant were being called on to make.

Board Chairman Len Salvatori also made it clear that he felt the curator would have to be available to all schools and teachers in the county if the board agreed to the cost sharing program.

Trustee Ralph Young expressed concern about how continuity could be achieved if the curator spent one day a week in a school and two weeks later, visited another school for two days.

But Finn felt the real value of a curator to the board would not lie in classroom instruction but rather in consultation with teachers and in coordinating programs at the gallery which would complement courses of study.

Hodgson said the person's time could be flexible, but that before the board could agree to sharing costs, it would have to know that it was not just giving $6000 to the gallery. He said the job description would have to set out clearly what the board and the Guild would expect from the individual.

Trustee Lloyd Johnson was also concerned whether or not the board would get sufficient return from the proposed investment.

"Do we need a $6000 expenditure for the art program in the schools?" he asked.

"In my view it's a heck of a good deal," Finn commented. She said the Guild would consider hiring the curator even if the board did not share the cost.

Later in the meeting, the board passed a resolution agreeing to enter into a cost sharing agreement with the Guild, and appointing Salvatori, Hodgson and Victoria Street school principal Ruth Gorrie to a joint hiring and supervision committee for the curator.

Ratepayers want Irondale road improved

dale Road was the other main concern of ratepayers, many of whom felt the road should be a priority with the new council.

Incumbent deputy reeve John Francis, who is being challenged for the seat by newcomer Ray Cox, told the audience that if the taxpayers wanted a mile of the Irondale road repaired every year, council could do it. But, he said, the costs would eat up the township's entire road budget. He also told the meeting that the road is "forced" for much of its length, meaning that council has a right-of-way but that the land remains private property.

"We can't even cut a tree down without taking flak from somebody," Francis said.

But, he said, "you give us the funds in taxes and we'll do what you want."

Clerk Geoff Wynne said council had tried repeatedly to have the road designated a development road by the MTC, but traffic counts are so low on it that the province will not agree. And although it was made clear that no change in that situation is likely, incumbents and hopefuls agreed that they could continue to fight for funds to have the road improved.

The evening began with brief speeches from the incumbents and hopefuls.

Reeve Bob Vick, who is being challenged by former deputy reeve and councillor Don Smedmore, said he had been accused of being too tight with the budget, but that being tight with taxpayers' money was his way. He indicated that he was not about to change.

His opponent, who owns a motel in the township, said he had both time and knowledge to devote to the job. "We must have a better tax base to get the things for Snowdon that we want and need," Smedmore said. "We must look to growth to get Snowdon off and running."

He gave no indication of how that growth could be accomplished, however, and was not questioned on the subject by anyone in the audience.

Incumbent deputy reeve Francis said he was particularly concerned about attracting new people to the area, and to that end, had helped to start up the Snowdon business and community group.

Objective of the group is to make the township grow by improving local facilities and promoting the area in any way possible, Francis said.

He noted that many young people are moving into the community to start up small scale farming, and urged the township's residents to make the effort to accept and get to know these newcomers.

Francis also said that he had tried to stick to a tight budget, particularly for the roads department, and that as a result, "there have been disagreements". But he said he would continue to spend taxpayers money, "as council sees fit".

Ray Cox, who is challenging Francis for the position, expressed concerns about crime prevention and what he sees as a need for a public utilities coordinating committee that would ensure services are not duplicated and that there is a minimum of disruption if repairs must be carried out by various groups such as hydro, roads departments and Bell telephone.

Cox said it was important to have a long term plan for the township. "If you have a plan and you pick away at it, you will eventually get things done," he said.

Council hopeful Brian Neville, an employee of the county roads department, felt his knowledge of roads would be a useful addition to council, and said he would "work for all the people" if elected.

Bert Smith, owner of Lochlin General Store, said he "didn't have any great, fantastic ideas". He said he ran for two reasons. Firstly, he said, he "had reasons to question" some of the things that have been done in the township. And secondly, he said he was against acclamations and wanted to ensure that voters would have a choice about who to elect to council.

Others trying for council positions who spoke briefly at the meeting are incumbent Dwain Wruth, part owner, with his father, of a farm in the township, and Francis Simmons, a stone mason making his first try for a seat.

Trustee Ralph Young, back in for another term on the county school board by acclamation, also spoke briefly, praising the quality of the school system and noting that a tough decision about the closure of small schools lies ahead.

A question and answer period followed the candidates speeches.

Among the topics touched on besides road problems and bridge expenditures were equalized assessment, aims of the new business and community group, availability of grants for work programs in the township, the condition of Scott's dam, and the possibility of a volunteer fire department for the township.

The latter suggestion was rejected as both costly and unnecessary since the township already receives protection under a sharing arrangement among Dysart, Anson, Hindon and Minden and Somerville Townships.

WARD II
MUNICIPALITY OF DYSART ET AL
FOR TRANSPORTATION TO THE POLLS PHONE 457-1811

Dysart et al: With few problems and solid progress, voters in Dysart are being called on to decide whether wisdom of experience or the vigour of fresh ideas and approaches should prevail

by Sue Cooper

Voters in Dysart et al's ward one will have a chance to choose the direction they want to see Haliburton Village take in the future, according to two of the prospective candidates for the area.

The candidates in this three-way race for the town's representative on council are incumbent Roy Brohm, a veteran politician who has been involved in municipal politics since 1952, Linda Beachli, secretary-treasurer and part owner of a Haliburton-based construction company, and Pat Kennedy, a local businessman.

Beachli and Kennedy are both maintaining that new blood is needed on council if progress in the village is to continue.

"One of the main reasons I want to run is that I really feel there should be some new blood on council," Beachli said in an interview.

Kennedy said he had decided to run for council because it is a good time to make gradual changes on council while an experienced reeve and deputy-reeve are still in their chairs. With the experience that these two senior municipal officials have, they could help shape new councillors into the teamwork of a good council, Kennedy said.

"If Roy (Brohm) was 20 years younger, I'd never consider running against him," Kennedy said.

Brohm refused to be interviewed on the pretext that the reporting might be biased and said time would be better spent concentrating on the campaigns of the younger candidates.

Although Beachli said several issues interested her, top on the list was the revitalization of the main street area in the village. Since she is adept at reading blueprints and is familiar with other aspects of the construction business, Beachli said she felt she could be an asset on a revitalization project.

Beachli also feels one of the more important issues Dysart et al council will face in the future will be taking over the management of the local Red Cross Hospital.

"I really feel there should be no quick decision made," so that when the time comes for the municipality to assume control (probably within five years) the best possible health care will be provided, Beachli said.

The municipality should strive to expand the services and take advantage of the hospital's potential when the management responsibilities are taken over, Beachli said.

Another important issue for Beachli is taking full advantage of the facilities and attractions which already exist in the area. She believes the community has only started to tap its recreational potential and facilities and says many people don't realize the importance of attracting tourists to the community.

Along with her concerns about future issues the municipality will face, Beachli feels younger people need to be involved in the township's activities.

"I think we need a change. I think we need younger people on council," Beachli said.

Kennedy is also promoting the idea of a change on council as part of his campaign. But he said it would be a tough race for any of the candidates to get elected in the ward.

"It is the first time the people in this ward have had a real choice in quite a long time," Kennedy said.

Other issues on this campaign trail, as Kennedy sees it, are the possibility of hiring a recreation director, promoting Haliburton Village and attracting light clean industry.

Kennedy said he was interested in the report made on the possibility of hiring a recreation director but said he would be studying before making a final decision. He said people in the village were interested in the proposal although they were not aware of all the contributing factors to a project like this.

Kennedy said Haliburton has excellent recreational facilities compared to any town. He mentioned the tennis courts, arena, curling club, squash courts and the extra-mural sports at the schools.

Haliburton Village should be promoting itself as a "nice, small, clean town," Kennedy said. The promotional strategy which the village uses should be more aggressive and it should not be through the Haliburton Highlands Chamber of Commerce, Kennedy said.

Since Haliburton is too far from the main arteries it is very doubtful any major industry could be attracted unless it was involved in the lumbering industry. He said light, clean industry would be beneficial to the community and would fit in well with the tourism base.

Kennedy said he was "willing to work, young and concerned", and if not elected he would hope the council would ask him to sit on one of the municipality's committees as he is interested in seeing Haliburton move ahead.

Kennedy has served as president of the Haliburton Kinsmen as well as serving on its executive, has acted for two years on the Haliburton Highlands Snowmobile Association and also works as a volunteer for the Haliburton ambulance service.

In ward two there is also a race for the council seat but no substantial issues seem to be cropping up.

Incumbent councillor, Gary McKnight is being challenged by Tim Casey. Both are local businessmen.

Casey who ran unsuccessfully for the office of deputy reeve last election said he seemed to be an annual contender in the elections.

"I don't think anyone should run uncontested," Casey said in a telephone interview.

Unfortunately, Casey said, people seem to be apathetic about elections.

The main concerns which have spurred him to run are what he sees as a need to look into the viability of an indoor swimming facility in the municipality and also the need to see more modern technology used in the maintenance and construction of the municipality's road system.

Although Casey said he was not criticizing the roads department, there are certain aspects concerning safety which Casey would like to see implemented.

Casey said he was concerned with the community after having sat on the executives of the Chamber of Commerce, Haliburton Minor Hockey Association, the Royal Canadian Legion Branch 129, and the Haliburton Farmers Association.

"My intentions are sincere," Casey said. He is married with four children and is partner in a drilling company.

Casey's opponent in ward two is incumbent Gary McKnight. Although McKnight feels there aren't many issues facing the candidates in the election, he said the steady progress made in the past few years should be kept up.

"My platform is just going to be: keep plugging lots of progress. If you look at Haliburton right now, it's a long way ahead of anything else around," McKnight said.

In his last term on council, McKnight served on the Harcourt community centre board, the recreation committee, the museum committee and the planning board.

In the past year, the Haliburton recreation committee has been seriously looking into the possibility of hiring a recreation director for the area. But McKnight said the hiring of the recreation director was not an issue in the election since the committee is examining the project.

"It's not an issue, it's just something we're looking into," McKnight said.

McKnight, who is married with three children, has served on council for the past six years. He is an owner of a Haliburton-based marina and serves on the Haliburton ambulance service.

In ward three, first-time candidate, Sid Cooper was acclaimed to the seat. Cooper will be taking over for councillor Jack Denholm who stepped down from the council's position this election.

Since Cooper is already acclaimed to the position, he said he first plans to learn the operation of council before he makes any decisions on important projects.

Cooper said he would like to see the municipality push for more economic development instead of the tourist industry which is well-established.

Cooper said he was interested in the recreation programs in the county especially with the high incidence of vandalism in the area.

"Perhaps if the young people had more opportunities in recreation they might not have so much time on their hands to do this damage," Cooper said.

Cooper suggested that open air ice rinks and supervised playgrounds as well as a recreation director might help improve the recreation facilities.

Other acclamations in Dysart et al were Murray Fearrey for reeve and deputy-reeve Harold Bannon.

In this term in office Fearrey hopes to turn more responsibility over to the councillors so he can spend more time on important issues instead of the day-to-day municipal politics earlier this fall, he said there was some public pressure urging him to stand for re-election.

"It's safe to say that I had visitations and calls from a lot of citizens feeling that the community had prospered in the last few years and that they would like to see me stand for re-election," Fearrey said.

Deputy-reeve Harold Bannon, who has been on council for 13 years, was also acclaimed to his position.

Bannon said "there are some tough decisions" facing the municipality in the next two years but felt that council had had a successful team in the last two years.

Tough decisions facing Dysart: Bannon complaints from the wards which should be funnelled through the council members.

"I've had a chance to rethink the role of reeve in the municipality, and I feel that I probably haven't been delegating enough responsibility to the deputy-reeve and council," Fearrey said.

Fearrey said he plans to set up certain municipal responsibilities for each council member and have them report their progress to council.

Although the reeve had thought of dropping out of

He said these two years were the best years for advancement in the municipality in many years. He noted that the completion of the Head Lake Park and lighting of the junction of Highway 519 leading into the village would be large projects in the next two years.

There will also be an election for the four school trustee positions to the Haliburton County Board of Education.

Running for office are incumbents Earl Cooper, Len

Glamorgan: With two seasonal residents proclaiming the community centre should be postponed and two permanent residents maintaining there is a need, the election trail heats up

The construction of a new community centre in Gooderham is taking a front seat on the election platform with at least two candidates in the election race saying the project should be postponed.

Deputy-reeve candidate Cecil Moore Osborne, a seasonal resident with a cottage on Stormy Lake, said he felt the possibilities for construction of the community centre should be investigated further before any definite steps are taken.

"There seems to be a lot of controversy on it. I think it should be given a lot more consideration before they go ahead with it," he said in an interview.

On the other side of the fence, council incumbent, Robert McCausland who is trying to step up by entering the deputy-reeve's race, said if they can build the community centre at a "reasonable cost" he is all for it. On Monday evening a committee, including McCausland, was meeting with a contractor to try to negotiate a lower price for the complex.

McCausland said he felt the ratepayers were split on the matter.

"It's 50-50 all the way around," he said.

However Osborne has a different idea maintaining that seasonal residents feel strongly about postponing the building until the township can afford it.

"Of course they (the cottagers) are very much against it, not in a definite way, but for the present time until there is a need for it. In other words they feel the need is not there, at present," Osborne said.

Osborne said he agreed with this argument and felt the project should be investigated further before any financial commitments were made.

Since a feasibility study has already been completed on the project, McCausland said the present council was trying to finalize contract prices to get the project underway as soon as possible.

He pointed out that if a decision was not made in the immediate future the construction would not be able to get underway until next spring. He said an important aspect of the project would be the creation of much needed winter work in the area.

Aligned on the same side of the argument as Osborne is councillor candidate Jane Franklin who is the president of the Stormy Lake Property Owners Association.

"We just feel with this community centre going in, that it really, looking at it financially, is not a necessity right now," Franklin said from her home in Thornhill on Monday.

She suggested that it might be possible to look at the idea in about three years if it seemed more financially feasible at that time.

"We feel one of the ways we can help to shelve it for a little while, is to run for council," she said.

has been directly responsible for the community centre project.

McCausland, who has served four years as councillor for Glamorgan, said one of his reasons for running for the position of deputy-reeve was to become more involved with the matters concerning the centre.

He said he would like to be they're the majority," he said.

Another major issue which the township will be facing in the next term is the possible closing of the township's primary school.

McCausland has been council's representative on the committee trying to stop the closure of the school. The Haliburton County Board of education in business and industrial matters and was active on the development committee for Peterborough. He has been involved with service organizations including the Kiwanis and Wiseman's Club.

In the six years since his retirement, Osborne said he has spent a considerable amount of time in the area and felt that it would not be a disadvantage that his home is in Peterborough.

"There's no handicap that way," Osborne said. He said he would be available for all meetings and could be in the township within two hours after being notified of a meeting.

The four-way race for councillors includes Franklin, Barr, Larry Hunter and incumbent Glenn Graham.

Franklin, who works at home, said she would have no difficulty attending the meetings and could be available for township duties whenever necessary.

"It's no good getting into something if you're not going to put the effort into it," Franklin said.

She has acted as president of the Stormy Lake association for the year as well as being involved in other cottage association seminars and meetings.

Franklin said she was concerned by the seeming lack of communication between council and all residents in the township.

"We, ourselves, find things out way after it's been done. We're not there just to serve ourselves, we're there to serve everybody, the residents and the cottagers," Franklin said.

"It's what's going to be happening in 20 years from now," that has spurred Franklin into having a say in the township's development.

She is married with two children.

Barr, who is making her first attempt at running for office said she is reasonable and sensible and interested in the community. She is a partner in Barr's General Store and is married with two children.

Barr said she is not familiar with many of the issues of the council because she has not been part of the regular meetings.

"This is my first attempt at this type of job, if you want to call it that, and I feel I'm reasonable and sensible," Barr said.

Larry Hunter, who has served four years as a councillor and two years as a deputy reeve, has decided to return to municipal politics this election.

"I think with being on council I can help out and assist in some ways," Hunter said.

Hunter said the construction of the new community centre was going to be important but felt it would probably not be an undue burden on the taxpayers.

"If they watch themselves properly, we can come out of it without affecting taxes too much. If you go at it too hard it's going to hurt the small businesses and the people with too big of taxes," Hunter said.

Hunter mentioned that it is important to watch the budget since Glamorgan is a small township.

He is married with two children and is the owner of J.J. Hunter Lumber in Gooderham.

The other candidate in the race for the council seats is incumbent Graham. Graham ran for council in the last election but was defeated. He was then appointed to council when a vacancy occurred.

Graham said his main concern in the township is the road system. During the past term the township residents were irate when council hired a non-resident for the position of road superintendent.

After a series of confrontations, a local resident was hired for the position and the problems are being smoothed out.

"We have a good man now," Graham said.

He said he would like to see the township system upgraded.

"I'd like to spend a couple more years with it. That's my main reason (for running again)," Graham said.

Graham's interest in the township road system stems from the fact he was road superintendent for 10 years until 1972.

Two seats in the township were acclaimed; the reeve's chair and the school board trustee.

Ken Maguire, who will be serving as reeve for the next two years, was elected to council last year and then stepped up to the deputy reeve position when it became vacant during the term. It was Maguire's first term in office.

This election, veteran reeve Robert Fotheringham decided to step down from the reeve'ship.

In an interview earlier this month Maguire said he was concerned about the community centre project and also a five-year roads pro-

Anson, Hindon, Minden: No real issues for newcomers but concerns in back of minds

Anson, Hindon and Minden ratepayers will have a number of choices on the ballots as two candidates have put their name forward for the reeve's chair in this municipal election.

Incumbent reeve Sinc Nesbitt is running for re-election while Lloyd Walker is challenging that position.

Nesbitt, who has just finished serving his first two-year term as reeve of Anson, past, is now operating well under the arena manager, Nesbitt said.

"We just want to keep on going; we seem to be on the upgrade," he said.

Before coming to Anson, Hindon and Minden council in the last election, Nesbitt served as reeve in Stanhope for 10 years.

Walker, like Nesbitt, is also a veteran politician after serving four years as councillors, five ratepayers have put their name forward for the three seats. Lyle McKnight is the only incumbent to seek re-election this term while four newcomers including Larry Cummins, Dean Elliott, Leroy Lichty and Ed Pergolas have joined the race.

Cummins runs a television sales and service business in the northern part of Minden Township. He said he would push for better communicaon the issues that arise since prospective councillors don't have the inside information on which to base their decisions, Elliott said.

However he did promise that if elected, he would try to find an "honest, fair solution" to any problem council faced.

"Honestly, I don't feel we've been badly administered in these last two years," he said.

A sensible logical solution."

Elliott said he feels he has something to offer the municipality since he has a history of involvement in municipal government, and has a municipal clerk-treasurer degree.

As an incumbent candidate, McKnight knows many of the issues that will be surfacing in the next two years. One of the major issues to be considered will be the strategy the municipality adopts when it will be required to take over the management of the local hospital within three years.

In the recent past the Red Cross Society announced a plan that will turn all the outposts hospitals in Ontario over to the local governments. McKnight said he was "very interested" in the proposal.

Another important issue the municipality will be facing is the problem of having land rezoned for industrial purposes. It would be easier to attract light industry if the land was already available.

"It's tough," said McKnight.

"If the municipalities in the county pulled for a development in a central area, possibly Donald where the rail line passes through, it might be easier to attract industry," McKnight said.

"We have to work a little harder at it than we have been," he said.

However, McKnight could not foresee these issues turning into serious problems in the near future.

It would be good to keep the taxes in line, which also makes the ratepayers happy, McKnight said.

The municipality should be trying to upgrade the roads in the outlying areas, McKnight said, adding that he would also like to see the streets in Minden repaved but the problems with the ministries are difficult to solve.

As a thought, McKnight said he would like to see the idea of two or three public meetings with council each year, which was suggested at the all candidates meeting last week.

McKnight has served four years on council.

Another newcomer to the political arena this election is Leroy Lichty, a restaurant owner in the municipality.

One of Lichty's main stands is to try to create more work for the residents in the area.

It might be helpful to have land available for companies to establish a business or light industry on, Lichty said. If the area was made more attractive more companies might want to locate here.

"We're really going to have to push it because otherwise nobody's going to

Centennial year, school closure are important Monmouth issues

When election day rolls around next Monday, voters in Monmouth Township will be voting only for councillors and school trustees.

When nominations closed last week, both reeve Keith Tallman and deputy-reeve Carman Coumbs were acclaimed to office.

Running for the three council positions were incumbent Alan Revill and newcomers Harry Clark, Barry Dunford and Reg Schofield. In the race for the sole seat on the county board of education are incumbent Ross Anderson and Jean Thomas.

Two major concerns have surfaced in Monmouth Township for this election. The coming year will be the township's centennial and concern is also being raised over the possibility of neighbouring small schools being closed as a result of declining enrolment.

One of the candidates for council, Harry Clark, said that although he can find no fault with the present council, he wants to run for council because he is interested in the community.

"I'd like to see the community go ahead," Clark said.

Clark ran unsuccessfully for the position of deputy-reeve last election. He has three grown children and works on his farm outside of Wilberforce.

Another newcomer to the political scene is Barry Dunford who makes his home in Tory Hill. Dunford said he decided to run because Tory Hill should be represented on council.

Margaret Finlay, who is from Tory Hill, decided not to run for re-election this time.

The school in the township should be kept open if at all possible, Dunford said. Although the board of education has not announced it would be closing the Wilberforce school, concern has arisen since the small school in neighbouring Gooderham is slated for closure unless the enrolment increases.

Dunford works for the Ministry of Natural Resources as a park superintendent at Silent Lake Provincial Park.

The only incumbent councillor seeking re-election this term is Alan Revill. Revill is looking forward to 1981 being an important year for the township since it will be celebrating its centennial.

Revill has been involved with the recreation board and he feels experience is needed to carry off well the activities planned.

"I feel it's a time for experience," Revill said.

Revill said he could not foresee any major problems that would be facing the municipality in the near future.

Revill has served one term on council and is a volunteer fireman as well as a local Kinsman.

Reg Schofield who is also running for a council position has the same interest in the township's centennial as does Revill.

"We hope to make it the biggest thing to happen in Haliburton County," Schofield said.

It would make it easier if a member of centennial committee was a member of council so he decided to run, Schofield said.

Schofield, who works on the recreation board and serves as a volunteer fireman, said he is "behind the township 100 percent."

Now retired, he has served on the public school board and on council for 10 years, in earlier terms.

Challenging 10 year veteran school trustee, Ross Anderson, is Jean Thomas.

Anderson has been a member of the school board since the county board was formed in 1969, and said he plans to try to keep the board's budget low without cutting the quality of education. He described the present budget as being "pared to the bone".

"It's generally a good system," said Anderson who works for the Ministry of Revenue, assessment divis-

Two veteran politicians want reeveship

Hindon and Minden says he is pleased with the progress he has made.

"I spent two years trying to turn the place around and I finally got there," Nesbitt said.

The completion of the library/art gallery which has been on the drawing boards for the past seven years will be one of the big projects for the next council, Nesbitt said.

Also a new park which the local Kinsmen have been trying to get off the ground should be given the municipality's help, he said.

"I think that could be as big a drawing card as we could have in the municipality," Nesbitt said.

Basically, everything is running smoothly in the municipality, Nesbitt said. The arena, which has been plagued with problems in the past, is now operating well under the arena manager, Nesbitt said.

"We just want to keep on going; we seem to be on the upgrade," he said.

Although Walker said he didn't think it was right to disclose the type of policies he might enact, until he was elected, he said costs should be kept down for the taxpayers.

"I think you would treat it as a business. If you had a business and you hired me as manager, number one, I would go through each department and see what was cooking," Walker said.

After checking the departments, Walker said he would like to cut costs wherever he thought the township might be overspending.

However, he said he did not want to make any promises since he had not been elected

Campaigns end, but most important task still remains

The campaigns are winding down. The all candidates meetings are over and the open letters have been sent. Doors have been knocked on and hands have been shaken. Candidates have been interviewed and stories have been written. All that remains of the 1980 municipal election is the most important part of all, the marking of the "X's" that will determine who will hold public office for the next two years.

As nomination day passed, it appeared that a pall of apathy had settled over the county. Six reeves and six deputy reeves had been acclaimed, and at least eight of the 14 seats on the school board were uncontested. But as the weeks went by, two things became clear. Many of the people who received acclamations deserved them because they had been effective in their positions. The election process was weakened by the acclamations but the future of the county probably wasn't. And secondly, it was apparent that there were issues on which to base an election in some of the county's municipalities, and there were candidates with talents and ideas willing to face the personal and public test an election provides.

In some cases, people have let their names stand for election because they believe voters should have a choice. Most of those candidates have no particular positions on specific issues, important or otherwise. Most are quick to acknowledge that on the whole the affairs of their municipality have been conducted well. But most feel strongly enough about their municipalities and about the accountability elections are intended to provide that they have sought nomination. And for that commitment to a principle they are to be congratulated.

In at least three municipalities, important issues have surfaced in the present campaign. Glamorgan Township candidates have lined up on both sides of the community centre issue. Many people in the community, including the incumbent members of council, feel the centre is a necessity. They believe the township will be a better place to live, and that the bonds that hold its people together will be strengthened if they have a place to gather. They are also aware that the building must be paid for, and believe the community can handle the cost. On the other side of the issue are two candidates who feel the centre is not a necessity, and that it will burden taxpayers for years to come. Together they would represent a significant voice of dissension on council.

When Glamorgan voters mark their ballots Monday, they will have more to choose from than personalities, a fact which all should welcome.

An issue has also arisen in Lutterworth, where the reeve and council are being challenged for running together as a slate. The underlying question in this municipality is not whether or not things have been managed acceptably, but whether or not councillors disagree enough to render the decision making process meaningful. By their choices, ratepayers will indicate if the township has seen too much harmony for the people's good.

In Dysart the issues are as much philosophical as they are pragmatic, particularly in the race in Ward 1, Haliburton Village. The contest has shaped up as one that pits age and experience against youth and new ideas. Should voters opt for a proven record of service or look to the long term future by giving new candidates with new ideas a chance to experience the dynamics of council? Which will prove most important in dealing with the complicated issues the municipality is bound to face in the near future; experience or "new blood"? While neither choice carries dire consequences, either will say something about the people's view of municipal government.

Voters in Dysart's Ward two will also have a choice to make Monday, and it too pits an experienced councillor against a challenger with ideas about the direction council should take in the next two years.

Whether or not major issues have surfaced, voters in every municipality in Haliburton County should get out and exercise their right to make a choice. The people who have let their names stand for office have made a commitment to the concepts of democracy and freedom which are the foundation of the Canadian political and social system. Voters who turn out Monday will be recognizing the importance of that fact. Those who stay away will be leaving their future to chance.

LETTERS to the EDITOR

To the Editor:

This concerns the proposed county work on Elephant Lake road. There have been quite a few letters and articles about the 1/2 mile section that is under review. Most of them have been snipes back and forth between the county and residents and pointed out dollars and property and whether the county is doing the right thing in repairing rather than re-routing the road. My main concern has always been safety for all people using the road. In fact I was told at one time that a death may have to take place in order for the re-routing to happen.

Well, I just lost a trusted and true friend to Elephant Lake Road. At one of the corners where our county convinced the province to deviate from the required 400 feet of site clearance, a young man driving a log truck hit and killed my friend. It definitely was not the driver's fault. This corner has a good hill to climb just around that corner and a loaded log truck needs a little extra speed to make the hill and because of the blind corner anyone crossing the road is definitely putting their life in jeopardy. The driver, being a good person, came to me and reported the accident. He was very shook up as you can understand and could not even go back to the scene of the accident.

All persons using this section of the road have had close calls similar to this and I blame our county for their blatant refusal to do anything to correct the problem.

The traffic on Elephant Lake Road consisting of cars and trucks, cottagers, residents, truck drivers and tourists alike, should be up in arms in an effort to force the county to straighten the road before another death occurs. No amount of money is more valuable to me than a life.

Children from our area visit my lodge to swim, fish and play with my children. If just one child is hurt the county will be at fault and I will do everything I can in support of the parents of that child to make the county suffer just as much as the parents of the child will suffer. The driver of the vehicle will probably have charges laid because of the accident. Again, he won't be at fault, the county will.

Please, citizens of Haliburton, before another life is lost won't you come forth in support of this issue. Write to me, Bill Smith, Elephant Lake Lodge, Harcourt, Ontario or write to the Echo, as I do and air your views.

Thank you,
Bill Smith,

To the Editor:

It is with interest I read your comments "Does Anyone Care" in your October 22 issue.

I like to think that the citizens of my hometown, Aurora, care as do the citizens of Haliburton County.

The acclamation of anyone to me signifies the performance in the past has been good. It is hoped that if one thinks that the past performance has been unsatisfactory, he or she would be interested and concerned enough to try and do something about it. This could be in the form of running for office or in the form of being a member of a council-in-committee.

By having the acclamation process, one might think that the person in office might strive to do a better job. If a person is acclaimed, he or she could have the feeling that the area voters think that he or she has done a good job in the past term.

One would hope that the citizens of the area have concern for their area and not be recognized as being uninterested about their community.

Yours truly,
Don Oates,

To the Editor:

The history of the project to build a library cultural centre in Minden has been long, and at times, most disheartening. Were it not for the determination and convictions of the committee as to its service to the community, the project would long since have been abandoned. During this period the committee have raised over half the monies necessary to construct the size building we felt was needed.

To gain Wintario funds we needed the support of the local council. This we received after approaching the council with a presentation as is the accepted manner for such transactions. When a problem arose over our Wintario grant, Reeve Nesbitt accompanied the group to Toronto, along with John Eakins, M.P.P., to present a brief supporting our needs. We were successful in obtaining a grant of $25,000. We also needed assurance from our local council that any additional costs incurred, over the estimated expense, would be supported. Since that time our committee has worked diligently, and shall continue to raise more money, if such a situation arises. We are grateful to all those persons who have given us financial support. We have tried to protect your interests in securing a building worthy of your trust.

We have met with one obstacle after another in the four years since we began. As we look back, each obstacle has only succeeded in changing our direction until a better facility has emerged. We feel at last that we will have a building which will be functional and pleasing and which can be used by all members of the community.

In any project of this matter decisions must be continually made. Not every decision will be popular with everyone everytime. The decisions made during the planning and constructing of this centre have not come easily. What we have tried to do is to contribute a centre to the community which will serve the needs and interests of this community as well as our summer residents. If we succeed in this then the hours of work, frustrations and feelings of despair will have been worth it. We can only succeed if our fellow citizens, including our local council representatives give us the necessary help and encouragement, not only financially, but morally as well.

As others see it

Without embarking on a long-winded analysis of the current constitutional issue before the federal and provincial governments in Canada, there is one aspect of this business that is becoming very tiresome.

Somewhere within the debate over provincial and federal rights, and the debate over whether our prime minister should act unilaterally or not, is a question that we feel is completely irrelevant to the real issue.

And that irrelevant question is whether or not Pierre Trudeau is going to get into the history books or not or, worse yet, whether he is trying to or not.

We noticed with a great deal of disdain, the day after Trudeau's televised address to the country on the constitutional issue, that some news media headlined their stories or their commentaries rather subjectively, implying that Trudeau was writing his own passages in the history books.

Frankly, we are tired of this nonsense.

The constitutional discussion is much more important than whether Trudeau is seeking historical fame or not. Subjective decisions that he is doing so is not objective reporting of what is going on with respect to constitutional matters.

To turn the issue into a conflict of personalities is to sidestep the issue.

And the question of Canada's constitution is far too important to be glossed over by interpretations of personal motivations.

To the Editor:

Hello and perhaps farewell. This unusual situation arises because our farewell depends on your action and the reaction of your municipal councils to ensure a minimum level of personal protection to visitors!

The reasons for our unhappiness and impending exodus from Haliburton County are the following: We noted that the road reconstruction, although incomplete, had brought about increased traffic speeds and we complained about the increased risk to our personal safety. The proprietors of Silver Springs thereupon informed us that they have received an expropriation notice from the County of Haliburton to complete this section of County Highway #10 reconstruction. They added that there are no plans at the present time for a tunnel (or overhead footbridge). To a casual observer it is obvious that road visibility is inadequate at this section of the highway and that there is already an unacceptable level of personal risk to pedestrians crossing the highway which risk will be further magnified by increased traffic speed that an improved highway will bring.

How can we safely cross the highway to access Elephant Lake, the boats and the beach? The key question is whether or not measures can be taken at reasonable cost to provide safe crossing of the highway for Silver Springs guests? It is assumed that you wish to keep your tourist industry intact or even promote its expansion!

We are flabbergasted that the Haliburton County Council have decided to upgrade this section of the highway with apparent disregard for the consequences of that decision in regard to the safety of pedestrians crossing the road. We therefore consider this decision to be irresponsible and contrary to public policy and the public interest. If the Haliburton County Council make decisions which increase risks of pedestrian accidents here, why should we have confidence in their decisions for other sections under their jurisdiction?

Our customary advance reservation and deposit for our vacation next spring has not been made. Our future visits will depend on the action you take and its impact on the decisions of your politicians. We should like to draw your attention to the fact that the tourist industry is greatly influenced when the personal safety of its tourists is threatened.

We specifically ask the Haliburton County Council, the Municipal Council of Dysart et al, and the Township of Harcourt to review this matter. Our plea extends to all proprietors in the tourist industry since you will not be gaining our business if we quit Silver Springs, and we argue that even your businesses will be at risk if your area gains a reputation that your politicians make decisions which disregard the personal safety of visitors.

We encourage you to look into our story and complaint and if you doubt our common-sense and judgement then request engineering studies which will quantify the level of risk in terms of objective highway engineering standards. The situation I have described may be relatively minor in itself, but to our way of thinking has major implications of both principle and substance for all of us.

We are asking you to take action and make your views known to your elected representatives. We hope that our farewell will be temporary, and that your action will ensure that there will be no future neglect of safety considerations by your politicians.

I and my family wish to thank all of you who have served us (tourists) regularly twice a year on our vacations to the area; we thank our acquaintances, business proprietors and their staff, with a special thank you to the management of Silver Springs, Elephant Lake. Farewell and thank you from one tourist family.

Yours truly,

Our thanks goes out this week to Harry Cowan of Minden, Ontario for submitting this photo showing three teams of horses owned by three Minden men. The picture was taken in a large field near

This is a time of year when my heart goes out to city dwellers. It's a time when rural or small town living is immensely superior to that in the concrete canyons, the abominable apartments, the sad suburbs of metropolia.

In the city, day ends drearily in the fall. There's the long, wearying battle home through traffic, or the draughty, crushed, degrading scramble on public transportation.

The city man arrives home fit for nothing but slumping for the evening before the television set. And what greets him? The old lady, wound up like a steel spring because she hasn't seen a soul she knows all day, there's nothing to look at but that stupid house next door, exactly like their own, and the kids have been giving her hell.

He's stuck with it. For the whole evening. That's why so many city chaps have workshops in the basement. It's much simpler to go down cellar and whack off a couple of fingers in the power saw than listen to Mabel. Life is quite different for the small town male. He is home from work in minutes. He surveys the ranch, says, "Must get those storm windows on one of these days," and goes in, to the good fall smells of cold drinks and hot food.

His wife saw him at breakfast, again at lunch, has had a good natter with the dame next door, and has been out for two hours, raking leaves with the kids. She doesn't need him.

Instead of drifting off to the basement, the small town male announces that this is his bowling night, or he has to go to a meeting of the Conservation and Slaughter Club, and where's a clean shirt. And that's all there is to it.

While her city counterpart squats in front of TV, gnawing her nails and wondering why she didn't marry good old George, who has a big dairy farm now, the small town gal collects the kids and goes out to burn leaves.

There is nothing more romantic than the back streets of a small town in the dark of a fall evening. Piles of leaves spurt orange flame. White smoke eddies.

Neighbours call out, lean on rakes. Women, kerchiefed like gypsies, heap the dry leaves high on the fire. Kids avoid the subject of bedtime, dash about the fire like nimble gnomes.

Or perhaps the whole family goes to a fowl supper. What, in city living, can compare with this finest of rural functions? A crisp fall evening, a drive to the church hall through a Hallowe'en landscape, an appetite like an alligator, and that first wild whiff of turkey and dressing that makes your knees buckle and the juices flow free in your cheeks.

But it's on weekends that my pity for the city-dweller runneth over. Not for him the shooting-match on a clear fall Saturday, with its good-humored competition, its easy friendliness. Not for him the quiet stroll down a sunny wood road, shotgun over arm, partridge and woodcock rising like clouds of mosquitoes.

It's not that he doesn't live right, or doesn't deserve these pleasures. It's just that it's physically impossible to get to them easily. If he wants to crouch in a duck-blind, at dawn, he has to drive half the night to get there.

Maybe on a Sunday or holiday, in the fall, the city family decides to head out and see some of that beautiful autumn foliage. They see it, after driving two hours. And with 50,000 other cars, they crawl home in late afternoon, bumper to bumper, the old man cursing, the kids getting hungrier, the mother growing owlier.

Small town people can drive for 15 minutes and hit scenery, at least around here, that leaves them breathless. Or they'll wheel out a few miles to see their relatives on the farm, eat a magnificent dinner, and sit around watching TV in a state of delicious torpor.

Yup. It's tough to live in the city, in the fall.

Assistance For Career Planning

Haliburton's young people are about to receive the benefits of two individual projects that are getting underway this week and we congratulate the organizers of both for the initiative they have shown. Let us hope that it is not too long before we can observe the rewards of their efforts.

The first program to show immediate effects will be the Career Week that is now underway at the high school. Billed as "Careers of the 80's - A program of Career Awareness" the schedule provides students to attend presentations by a number of businessmen from all types of working environments as well as panel discussions, college vs. university, job market projections, and hiring priorities of large companies. It all winds up with participating students and businessmen at an informal banquet where more of their questions may be answered.

This comprehensive program was made possible through the participation of the Rotary, Kinsmen and Lions Clubs of our area along with Sir Sandford Fleming College, our Canada Manpower Outreach Office and the Chamber. Ken Rydman, school guidance counsellor, and Art Ward did the super job of bringing it all together and we sincerely hope this will become an annual event for the students.

The other program that is now taking shape is the formation of the "Haliburton County Community Industrial Training Committee". The government is encouraging the formation of such committees because they have come to recognize the overwhelming problem that is developing. While we are wrestling with record unemployment we are faced with a huge shortage of skilled labour. This committee will attempt to deal with that problem in relation to our own area.

The first step will be to undertake a survey within industries or businesses in the county to determine the scope, nature and severity of any imbalances between supply and demand for workers in skilled occupations. Once that is

by MP Bill Scott

Prime Minister Trudeau has launched a two-pronged attack on the very foundations of the Canadian Confederation, first with his ill-conceived Constitution Resolution, and now with his October 28th federal budget.

Trudeau's assault on Canada's traditional institutions and his efforts to replace the BNA Act with his own Constitution have brought Canada closer to a complete break-up than any events in our history.

Alienation of our four Western provinces has grown over the past few years, under a succession of Trudeau governments in Ottawa, and these latest moves on the part of the Prime Minister have brought the West to the brink of separation.

The recent Constitution proposals, if adopted, would virtually strip the provinces of their present powers to legislate in certain areas of provincial jurisdiction, and would exclude the provinces from any meaningful role in amending any future Constitution.

While the provincial governments were still reeling from the impact of the Constitution Resolution, Finance Minister Allan MacEachen tabled a budget in the House that would allow the federal government to levy taxes on natural gas, both for domestic use and for export.

This new taxing authority invades a traditional provincial tax jurisdiction. Before the budget was tabled, Alberta Treasurer Lou Hyndman said that a federal tax on the export of natural gas would be "a declaration of war" against the producing provinces.

Individual taxpayers and consumers will also feel the brunt of the new federal budget. One of the adverse effects of the budget will be greatly increased gasoline and fuel oil prices, an issue that our government was defeated on last February.

The Conservative government had planned to increase gasoline and fuel oil prices by 18 cents per gallon, but our plan called for grants to families with oil-heated homes to offset the increase in oil prices. The Liberal budget will result in even higher gasoline and oil prices than we had proposed, but without the offsetting grants to homeowners.

Another blow at the Canadian wage-earner is a 33 percent increase in Unemployment Insurance premiums, effective January 1, 1981. This is double the increase that our government felt would be enough to keep the UIC fund viable. This excessive increase in UIC premiums suggests that the government expects an increase in unemployment as a result of its budgetary proposals.

Present UIC premiums are $1.36 per week on each $100 in earnings, for the employee. Employers' rates are $1.89 per week for each $100 of an employee's earnings.

The new rates will be $1.80 per week on each $100 in earnings for employees, and $2.52 for employers. On earnings of $250 per week the employee will be paying $4.50 per week, or $234 per year. The employer will be paying $327.60 per year, for an employer/employee contribution of $661.60 per year. Using a round figure of 10 million insured workers, and an average weekly salary of $250, the UIC fund should receive in excess of $6.5 billion in the year 1981.

The budget contains provisions allowing the government to use tax monies to purchase privately-owned oil companies, and another provision will allow the government to confiscate 25 percent of the assets of any company that discovers oil in the Northern and off-shore oil fields. This will discourage oil exploration at a time when new sources of oil are vital to our future energy needs.

Look who's stealing your electricity.

Did you know that a quarter inch crack under the door is like having a nine square inch hole knocked through the wall? That's a lot of space for warm air to get out and cold air to get in. The easy solution is to replace worn weatherstripping around the door. Check caulking around door and window frames too.

A filter clogged with dust forces your furnace to work much harder. Furnace filters should be cleaned or replaced at least once a month during the heating season. It's a good idea to have the whole furnace checked over too, before the cold sets in.

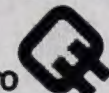

Use Energy Wisely

Tune-up, clean up. It's simple. Appliances that are clean and well-cared for last longer and use less electricity. Over the long run, you can save money on appliance replacement. And of course, the less energy you waste, the more dollars you save.

Don't waste your energy.

Anson, Hindon and Minden candidates quizzed on water deficit and water fees

Residents want more public meetings

After a successful all candidates meeting last Tuesday night, residents in Anson, Hindon and Minden now want to meet in informal public meetings throughout the year.

Near the end of the meeting which was attended by over 60 ratepayers, Bill Obee, a resident of Minden, suggested that it might be a good idea to get together in public meetings more often.

Chairman of the meeting, Jim Garbutt, agreed with Obee, saying that all the candidates meeting is that all the questions are usually directed toward the incumbents.

The big question they were called on to answer was how the $33,000 deficit on the water system arose.

"It just popped out of nowhere, at that time," incumbent councillor Lyle McKnight said.

The deficit, which had caused problems earlier in the year when water rates were nearly doubled in an ongoing effort to relieve the township of the deficit, was created when the province set aside money for the construction of the water tower in the town more than six years ago. It was the interest on this loan which created the deficit, McKnight said.

McKnight said the township was unaware of the deficit until earlier this year. Incumbent reeve, Since Nesbitt, said it was one of council's hardest decisions during his term in office.

He told the audience that council had considered taking a loan from a bank but that ratepayers would still be paying off the deficit in the end. He also said council had taken into consideration people in the town who are living on fixed incomes and the effect an increase would have on them.

McKnight explained that the water rates had to be raised to pay for the deficit since it wasn't fair to tax people in the outlying areas to pay for the town's water system.

J.O. Jackson, president of the new Anson, Hindon and Minden ratepayers' association, asked McKnight why the township demanded a $10 fee in order to apply for a permit to hook up to the system.

McKnight replied that the fee was used to pay for office expenses. However Jackson said the staff members at the municipal office were being paid to issue the permits and no fee should be necessary.

"If we don't bring revenue into the municipality from somewhere, we'll have to raise taxes," McKnight said. The evening began with all he candidates in the municipal election being given five minutes to speak on their proposals.

The speeches began with reeve Sinc Nesbitt who said he would not try to defend his actions of the past two years but rather would tell the audience where their tax dollars were spent.

He said the municipal office was functioning extremely well since a new bookkeeping system had been incorporated. The office has also been renovated and the outside covered in brick to enhance its appearance, he said.

Although some problems were encountered with roads in the early part of council's term, the township has "had an absolute turnaround," Nesbitt said.

The road department is operating within its budget and black topping programs are progressing well, he said. Nesbitt was cut short when his five minutes were up, however, and was unable to finish his report.

Next speaker on the agenda was reeve candidate Lloyd Walker, who told ratepayers had no criticism to offer on the previous council's track record.

Walker said he had put his name before the public because "a little opposition is good".

If elected, Walker promised to watch the township's money wisely. He then wished the crowd an early Merry Christmas and Happy New Year.

The first candidate for council to speak was Larry Cummins. Cummins said he had operated a business in the townships for the past 10 years and felt he was fair and reliable.

If elected he promised to "work hard to broaden my knowledge, to serve you better."

Dean Elliott, who is also trying for a council seat, said he felt he had something to offer the municipality and since he had taken a course in municipal government, believed he was aware of the basics involved in running the municipality.

If elected, Elliott said he would try to deal with each matter fairly and act in the best interest of the ratepayers.

He told the audience that a councillor must be ready to give 100 percent of his talents and time to the position.

He also promised to watch the township money very closely, if elected.

Leroy Lichty, another council hopeful, said he hopes to have more areas designated for light industry and also wished to establish a planning committee that might limit the number of one type of business which would be allowed in the township.

"We have to have some way of supporting our business which we have here now," Lichty said.

Lichty also suggested subdivisions be kept in the town to take advantage of the water and sewer systems, instead of being spread throughout the area. He said he did not mean that subdivisions should not be encouraged in areas like Ingoldsbys.

In his speech, McKnight outlined the progress which had been made on the road system and also the establishment of the small park in Ingoldsbys. He noted that there were always problems with the arena, but now this year it was running within its budget and a reserve fund to pay the unforeseen breakdowns of equipment or facilities had been established.

However, McKnight said he would like to see the arena used more to help offset costs.

He suggested the public's ideas on how to get more use out of the arena would be greatly appreciated.

"It shouldn't all have to come from the arena committee," he said.

Ed Pergolas, another candidate for council, suggested the municipality should push the new white water reserve located on the Horseshoe Lake rapids.

"This should really put Minden on the map," Pergolas said.

He would try to make it as beautiful as we can," to help promote the area to the canoe and kayak enthusiasts who will be taking part in international competitions in the near future.

The only candidate to be acclaimed to office in Minden was deputy reeve, Doug Pritchard.

Although Pritchard said he had been approached by many ratepayers telling him he should move up since he had acted as deputy reeve for many years, he said he had decided not to. However, he said he might consider the reeve's position in the next election.

Lutterworth council questioned

'Slate council' prompts race

Concerns over taxes and a 'slate council' running together as a block have prompted a race for the job of reeve in Lutterworth township.

Ingram Wessell, who served on council from 1973 to 1976, has tossed his hat into the ring for this election because he wants to break up what he termed the 'slate council' headed by incumbent reeve Ron Gambell.

Wessell maintains that there was not enough individualism on the past council, that particular groups were favoured, and that people should seek public office individually and not as a group. (All members of the 1978-80 council are seeking another term).

Wessell, who owns a trailer park and a construction business in the township, claims taxes have been rising too fast because of what he terms "reckless spending" by council. Too much equipment has been bought, he says, and too many buildings have been built with public funds in the last four years.

Wessell also believes that people who seek office in the township should have a vested interest in the area, something which he claims some members of the past council do not have.

Incumbent reeve Ron Gambell rejects Wessell's claims. He sees no reason to break up the present council because, he says, the members work well together.

Gambell says council doesn't always take the same tack on issues. "We've had some pretty heated discussions," he points out, but adds that agreement is generally reached quickly.

"We don't try to upstage each other," he says. "If council can't pull in the same direction we can't win. It's a team effort." "Maybe we get along too well, but on the other hand, we have the evidence to prove that things are running well."

Gambell maintains the fact that his council got along well with each other, left more time for planning for the future and moving the township ahead.

If he's elected, Gambell would like to see light industry attracted to a 100 acre parcel of land the township has set aside north of Kinmount. He also hopes something can be done to have a log tourist information bureau erected adjacent to Highway 35 in the township to serve the whole of the county.

Gambell was first elected to council in 1976, served as deputy reeve when a former reeve and deputy reeve resigned in late 1977, and was elected reeve in the 1978 election.

A five-way battle is also underway for council seats with incumbents Bill Prentice, Allan Stott and Bill Valentine all trying again, challenged by Floyd Pogue and Peter Stribling.

Deputy reeve Glynn Lewis was returned to that office by acclamation.

Pogue, who is semi-retired after 39 years of working seasonally for the township, would also like to see some changes around the council table.

"It's more or less like a one-man council right now," he said.

Pogue polled the fourth largest number of votes out of eight candidates in an unsuccessful bid for office in 1978.

Peter Stribling, another council hopeful, is entering the race for the first time. A caretaker at a summer camp who has lived in the area for 10 years, six of them in Lutterworth, he has no special platform but wants to help people in any way he can as a member of council.

Bill Prentice, who was appointed to council in 1977, and elected in 1978, opted to run again because he feels the township is moving ahead.

He denies the charge that council voted too often together as a group.

"It's not a 'yes' council," he said. "Everyone has their own ideas but we do get together and do it (the township's business)."

"We're at ease with each other, so why not run together?"

Prentice sees the sale of 66 foot allowances and the implementation of new assessment equalization factors as council's major challenges in the coming term.

Prentice is the owner of a snowmobile and mobile home dealership in the township.

Allan Stott was also appointed to council in 1977 and like Prentice, ran successfully for a seat in 1978.

A former councillor in Dundas, Ontario, he retired to the township two and a half years ago.

Stott says council's biggest challenge will be to keep taxes down while still purchasing needed equipment for the roads department.

"We're going to keep them (the taxes) down," he says. "Most people who own cottages, can't afford to pay through the nose."

Stott also dismisses any suggestion that council gets along too well.

"We don't always see eye to eye. We dissent quite often. But we remain friends throughout."

Bill Valentine, the third incumbent on council and a former reeve of the township, also maintains that council disagrees on many issues.

"Everybody is perfectly aware that there are five individuals," he said. "Quite often issues are thrashed out very heartily."

Valentine says things have never been better in the township. "We've made our money work for us," he commented. He feels council has been successful in keeping taxes down as much as possible, and points out that "we don't owe a nickel". And he sees no major issues or problems looming on the township's horizon.

In the other seat in the township, incumbent trustee Cheryl Murdoch was acclaimed to the seat for another term.

Stanhope votes for councillors

Reeve, deputy-reeve, two school trustees acclaimed

The only election race the ratepayers of Stanhope Township will see this time at the polls is the contest for council seats.

After the nominations closed two weeks ago, Reeve Jim Harrison, deputy-reeve Elgin Stouffer and school trustees Leroy Eager and Dorothy Kinsmen were all acclaimed to their respective positions.

Only two incumbent councillors are running for re-election, Elvin Johnson and Harry Davis, while three residents have put their name before the public, Ann Barker, Penny Gough and Dale MacDonald.

Although Barker said she could not promise any specific items she would like to see carried out, she said the steady growth which the township has been experiencing should be continued.

"You really can't predict what's going to happen in the next two years," Barker said.

She explained she would do her best to examine situations carefully and make the best decision possible.

However, she said council should be careful not to get into debt over the township's head because of the present economic condition.

Barker has been involved with the community centre board and the fire department as well as acting as chairman of the Stanhope Fund Days (with a lot of help, she said).

One of incumbent Davis' main concerns is trying to hold the line on taxes with the inflation rate at the level it is. He said a new budgetary system, which he had introduced to the township, was working well.

Davis said he would like to see more tourism promotions for the area and suggested council should be aware of the programs being undertaken by the Metro Carnarvon Board of Trade and Wine Tasting Society.

Davis said he would like to see the recreational program in the community continue since the addition of the new tennis courts had been added to the township's park area.

"We have more to offer our people, now," he said.

Candidate Gough said she would like to see the township keep up with the progressive pace it has now established.

"The township is really nice," she said.

Some of her ideas for the next term in office are to continually improve the township's road system, restore the former municipal building for a museum, establish a ladies auxiliary and make more use of the community centre.

She suggested council might attempt to invite business and industry into the township but care would have to be taken to ensure no pollutants could ruin the environment.

Gough said she had many bookkeeping abilities and as well, had served on the civil defense league for many years.

Incumbent Johnson said one of the main issues which will be facing the township is the sale of 66 foot original shoreline allowances.

He also highlighted some of the park expansions which have been carried out in the township including the Hall's Lake swimming area and many boat launches on lakes.

He said he would like to see some trimming done along the path which leads to the lookout near Stanhope Park and also playground equipment should be installed at the new park in the next year.

Input from the residents on park development and ideas where boat launches might be needed are appreciated by council, Johnson said.

Candidate MacDonald said he could not foresee any "real hot issues" facing the township in the next two years.

MacDonald said he was interested in seeing continued growth in Stanhope. He said he was not a politician, just an interested citizen.

In the future, MacDonald said he would like to see more work created for the young people so they could live and work in the township.

Light industry would be ideal for the township but, MacDonald said he did not have any concrete ideas on how to attract it. He also said pollution control would have to be taken into consideration.

Also, the Ministry of the Environment should be asked to study the septic systems located on the shores of all lakes to make sure that no one is inadvertently polluting the lakes, MacDonald said.

person should be hired on a part-time basis to help identify children with high intelligence and diagnose those with learning disabilities.

Turner also called for more support for teachers who have to handle the problems both kinds of children can pose.

"My priorities are the people that are in the buildings, not the buildings," she said.

"I don't believe that the only thing taxpayers are concerned about is money," she said.

Turner also noted that the system should provide a "solid education" coupled with a "recognition" of the needs of employers.

Council hopefuls were next on the agenda, following brief remarks by retiring incumbent Jack Denholm, and newly acclaimed councillor for Ward 3, Sid Cooper.

Cooper thanked his nominators and joked that he didn't intend to say what his platform was because he might regret it in two years.

Tim Casey, who is challenging incumbent Gary McKnight for the seat in Ward 2, said voters were facing "a non-issue election", noting that he could not find much fault with what had gone on in the past.

He said there had been a number of improvements in the community and that he wanted to see the trend continue, "at the least possible cost to the taxpayers" which he said, is a problem faced in any business.

Casey told the crowd that he was concerned about safety in the roads department, noting "I cannot see why they should be without a good and efficient radio system."

In closing, Casey said he felt no one should go unchallenged.

lenged, and that he had run to give voters a choice.

McKnight began his remarks by noting that radios were already on order for the roads department, and went on to list some of the improvements that had taken place in the ward in the last two years.

Jobs and industrial development are the main challenges facing the municipality in the next term, McKnight told the meeting.

Next up were candidates from Ward 1, where veteran councillor Roy Brohm is facing a challenge from newcomers Linda Beachli and Pat Kennedy.

Beachli, a partner in a local construction company, said she wanted to see some "different and better solutions" to problems in the community "than council had come up with in the past."

She denied any suggestion that there were no issues in this election or that municipal councils have little impact in people's lives.

A key issue, she said, is the need for economic development. She advocated concentrating efforts on improving the village and making better use of the area's potential to attract tourists.

"We have so much before our eyes, and this is where our efforts should lie," she said.

Council should be able to offer creative suggestions to store owners who want to upgrade their storefronts, she told the meeting, and added that steps must be taken to ensure that new amenities such as the sidewalks and park do not deteriorate. She suggested a student might be hired in the summer to keep the sidewalks swept.

"We must take the initiative so the community does not fall prey to haphazard development or neglect," she said.

Another concern is the future of the Red Cross Hospital, control of which will be turned over to the community by 1984. Beachli said council must look carefully at all the options in order not to lose the service, and might even consider expansion to meet such needs within the community as chronic care.

Beachli also noted that she is in favour of a recreation director "if feasible".

In closing, Beachli said there should be some new blood on council.

"Young, progressive people can only be an asset," she said.

Incumbent Roy Brohm noted that the past council had worked hard to boost the community.

"I can sincerely say that they left no stone unturned to make the entire municipality a better place to live," Brohm said.

He noted that the municipality has made "steady progress" over the years and "that there is hardly a pond or a puddle that doesn't have cottages on it now."

In order to attract new residents to the community, Brohm said, "we must have work for the people."

He said council has "tried every angle for industry" and is willing to supply land and water for $1 a year if an industry wanted to locate in the municipality.

Brohm noted that the main thing he had to offer "is my experience and my dedication to the people of Dysart."

"And if anybody's kicking about my age," he added that one of his uncles lived to be 104, and that he expected to be around for a long time to come.

Salvatori, Derrell Stamp, Nancy Stinson and newcomer Blanche Turner.

One of the important aspects of sitting on the board is co-operation between the board, teachers and parents, according to Cooper.

"I'm still working for the idea of closer co-operation between teachers and the board," Cooper said.

The new association for parent involvement in the education system which met two weeks ago, will be an asset to improved communications, he feels.

Cooper has spent two years on the county board as well as four years on the public school board before the county board was formed.

Another incumbent running for re-election is Len Salvatori, who acted as chairman of the board during the past year, and has served on local school boards for the past 18 years.

The important issues of this coming term will be the proposed closing of the smaller schools in outlying areas, Salvatori said.

The board has started negotiating with residents in both the Dorset and Gooderham areas where declining enrolments are starting to take their toll.

While Salvatori said the amount of money it is costing the board to operate the small schools is being taken into account, the most important factor in any decision to close the schools is the lack of good education programs.

"We couldn't provide a program we felt the kids needed," Salvatori said.

He said if the enrolment in the Dorset school doesn't drastically increase, the school will be closed and the students will have to travel about 10 miles to a public school in Muskoka. Half of students now attending the school in Dorset are residents of Muskoka, Salvatori said. "Nobody likes to close a school in a community," he commented.

Salvatori said he felt the board was running well and that the school system is good.

"I think we run a pretty tight ship," he said.

Derrell Stamp, who just finished his first two-year term on the board, is also seeking re-election this time at the polls.

Stamp said in the past two years he has learned a great deal about how the board operates and feels he would like to continue to represent the people.

In the next two years, the board will have to face problems created by declining enrolment and teacher redundancy.

"If we have continued declining enrolment, the board will probably have to reduce its teaching staff. Those are things the board will have to look at in the next two years," Stamp said.

Another idea Stamp would like to see get off the ground would be a teachers and board relations committee. Stamp said this would improve communications.

"I know sometimes in board decisions that perhaps a full explanation is not given to the teachers. They sometimes see the board as dictatorial and conversely there's times when teachers perhaps express opinions that the board doesn't fully understand," Stamp said.

Stamp said if the association could be formed it would be a "benefit to both parties."

In the past two years, Stamp has worked on the transportation committee and the negotiating team.

He works as a building inspector and planning supervisor for the municipality and is married with two children.

Incumbent Nancy Stinson is running for re-election this term to continue "working towards better education."

Stinson agreed with the other board members that the issues facing the board will be the closing of the smaller schools.

"As far as the school closures, they've got to be dealt with individually because every area has a different idea of why they should and why they shouldn't (close)," Stinson said.

Stinson is married with three children and is partner with her husband in a dairy business in the village.

The only newcomer to the election race for school board trustees is Blanche Turner, who is training consultant for career and industrial studies at Sir Sandford Fleming College in Haliburton. She has been involved with education for over 15 years. In the past she has worked for boards of education in both Windsor and Toronto as well as at the college.

If elected, Turner says she will be committing herself to providing "quality education for all students."

"I don't mean just your nice average student who fits into a regular class, necessarily. That includes gifted as well as retarded children or those with learning disabilities," Turner said.

Until June, Turner was assessing learning problems in children for the board and now there is no assessor undertaking this responsibility Turner said.

Turner said this identification of children's problems was important to the educational system.

"It's certainly one of my priorities," Turner said.

Another aspect of education which interests her is the role that parents should play. She said parents have certain responsibilities to their children and too often these responsibilities are unfairly given to the teachers to cope with.

"Teachers are asked to be everything from parents to priest to counsellor and I think that's asking them to do something they're not necessarily trained for and that they don't have the time to do," Turner explained.

Other concerns Turner has are the lack of programs which combine education with training programs to give students a well-rounded education to prepare them for the working world. She feels programs should be initiated to teach students skills which can lead to employment in the area when they finish their schooling.

Turner is married with three children.

When voters in Dysart go to the polls next Monday to elect their representatives for the next two years they should take into account the issues which will be facing the prospective candidates.

Voters have choices in Snowdon

Ratepayers in Snowdon township have many choices to make when they go to the polls next Monday.

In this southern township, candidates are running for all positions except for school trustee where incumbent Ralph Young was acclaimed to office.

In the race for reeve, veteran reeve Bob Vick is being challenged by Don Smedmore who has served on council and as deputy reeve.

Smedmore ran against Vick in the last election and was defeated. He said he feels it is time for a change in Snowdon.

"I think Snowdon can have better things," Smedmore said.

The township had been operating with poor administration for years and something should be done to improve the situation, Smedmore said. This year the township went into debt and "still has nothing to show for it," he added.

Incumbent reeve, Bob Vick who has served as reeve for the past 12 years, said one of the important issues facing the township is the retention come way up here to set up," he said.

Some of the important fix-up jobs the municipality should tackle are the business improvement area for the downtown core, the streets in Minden should be improved and street lights are lacking, Lichty said.

"I'm all for the BIA," Lichty added.

An important issue Lichty would like to investigate further is the minimum lot sizes on the area lakes. Although he was hesitant to make his entire concern public at this point he said: "I feel the minimum lot sizes on lakes are too small."

Lichty has no previous experience on council.

Candidate Pergolas is also thinking along the idea of beautifying the area so people will be attracted to it.

The area now has a good chance to improve its tourism base with the new white water championships that are being held on the Horseshoe Rapids, Pergolas said.

Every effort should be made to make the area more appealing since most of the money in the county presently comes from tourism, he said.

"Everytime we talk about tourism around here, it seems like a dirty word," Pergolas said.

The municipality only needs to do a few little things that would make quite a difference in its attractiveness, Pergolas said.

Pergolas said he has financial experience that he feels will be helpful to him on council. He has never sat on municipal council before.

Incumbent Doug Pritchard was acclaimed to the position of deputy-reeve.

In the positions for public school trustees, both incumbents Lloyd Johnson and Don Booth were acclaimed to office.

Johnson said the major issues facing the board in the next two years are declining enrolment and changes in high school curriculum that will better prepare graduates for work in the area.

A committee has been established to enable the board to work with teachers and employees to discover the skills and training that are needed for a student to leave school and join the work force.

Booth echoed this point of view adding: "We have to listen to the needs of the people we're educating."

The closing of the smaller schools will be a difficult decision according to Booth.

"If it comes to a point where, cost-wise, they're really not in the public's interest, definitely we'll have to close them. That would be a hard decision," Booth said.

However, Johnson said each school will have to be looked at individually since they are not all in the same situation and all do not have the same expenditures.

Anson, Hindon, Minden council meets

At the October meeting of Anson, Hindon and Minden council, the following matters were considered:

G. Crosby of Totten Sims Hubicki presented his engineering report to council and advised that extra culverts installed in the causeway would not have any beneficial effect on the flushing action of Horseshoe Lake. Wind induced currents might possibly have more value than the natural flow. G. Lucas of the Horseshoe Lake Association questioned Mr. Crosby on several matters. Council directed the clerk to contact M.T.C. regarding possible funding for an in-depth soil tests study of the causeway.

The association was also requested to assist the municipality financially and morally.

J. Earl Palmer was present requesting permission to deed the existing township maintained road passing through Lot 10, Concession 7, Minden Township to the municipality at no cost to the McCracken's. Council directed the clerk and E. Palmer to ascertain for the next meeting, the cost to survey the road involved.

P. Lindquist of the Regional Assessment Office attended to present the results of the impact study under Sec. 86 of The Assessment Act. Council agreed to request the Minister of Revenue to proceed with the revision of assessment pursuant to Section 86 of The Assessment Act.

G. Lewis was present regarding the turnaround on the riverbank in front of St. Paul's Anglican Church. Council advised him to contact his people for a possible solution to their parking problem and report back to the next meeting.

Tenders were received from D. Campbell, G. Elstone, P/L. Carnarvon Lumber and 1867 Confederation Log Homes.

A letter was received from the Minden Red Cross Society donating three rafts for future swim programs. A letter of thanks is to be sent to the Secretary of the society.

Severance application #H-275/80 was approved subject to the following conditions: - A quit claim deed or agreement that the applicant relinquish any right to any property adjacent to and lying within the 33 foot distance from the centre line on any property in this application severed or retained; - that all driveways on parcels in application be approved by the township before building permits are issued; - sufficient property on the corner of Lot 21, Concession 9 and Lot 21, Concession 10 at the location of the existing township maintained road be granted to the municipality to straighten the existing dangerous curve; and payment of the $50 application fee.

Council agreed to extend the lease on the gravel pit in Lot 13, Concession A, Township of Anson for three months for the purpose of the Ministry of Natural Resources wood program.

By-law 80-50, a by-law to authorize the sale of land, was passed.

recently about the government's land banking. Questions are being asked about former Treasurer John White's actions and thought processes in the early 1970s when he decided to buy land near Lake Erie to accommodate future growth which has never taken place.

Mr. White is now retired from politics. However, he recently told a Legislative Committee which is investigating the controversial government land banking that the decision to buy 12,689 acres in South Cayuga at a cost of about $30 million came to him in a vision while he was driving back to London one night. He said he also urged the Cabinet to buy 10,000 acres near Prescott on Lake Ontario because it was his "dream" that a major industrial development would locate there. Most of it remains undeveloped.

The South Cayuga and Prescott parcels, together with another big block of land in Haldimand-Norfolk, cost $70 million. As Liberal Leader Stuart Smith said, "It's one thing for the former treasurer to have had a dream or a vision in his limousine, but it is quite another to have been able to persuade the Premier of the province that the dream was worth $30 million of public money."

Independent appraisers have said the government would be lucky to get half its $66.4 million back from the Haldimand-Norfolk land - that is the money which it has paid out in purchase price and carrying charges.

The controversy will continue, with the added complication of news that the land is being tested as a possible site for the disposal of liquid industrial waste.

By-law 80-51, a by-law to authorize the sale and conveyance of property known as Block A on Registered Plan 357 and By-law 80-52, a by-law to authorize the sale and conveyance of property known as Block A, Plan 559 were also passed.

In the matter of a request from Mrs. Chisemore to install a culvert on property in Lot 6, Concession 8, Township of Minden council confirmed that the property is a private access therefore the municipality cannot assist in the installation of said culvert. Council had no objection to "Blairhampton Alternative" advertising in a commercial zone on Highway #35 subject to approval from M.T.C.

Council accepted the tender of 1867 Confederation Log Homes to construct the Minden Cultural Centre for the total contract price of $50,500 subject to the approval of the Cultural Committee; and providing that the building conforms with the Ontario Building Code in all respects. This price is to include pine V joint ceiling.

No election in Sherborne Livingstone, McClintock

Voters in Sherborne, McClintock and Livingstone will not have to travel to the polls next Monday since every member of the council and the school trustee has been acclaimed to office.

Fred Baum, incumbent, was returned to office when Marlene Shortreed withdrew her name following the close of nominations October 20.

In the deputy-reeve's position, Dalton (Mac) MacDonald, was acclaimed to office when no other residents filed nomination papers and formed deputy-reeve Don Shortreed had opted not to run for office this term.

MacDonald, who had also filed for the position of councillor withdrew his name from the council race after being acclaimed to the deputy-reeve's chair. When he withdrew his name from the councillor contest only three names were left on the list and thus all were acclaimed.

Serving on council for the next two years will be Olga Cunningham, Fran Gower and Joyce McKey.

When nominations closed on October 20, no person had registered to run for the position of public school trustee, however when nominations were re-opened the following Wednesday Dave McDonald put his name forward. He was the only nomination for this position, so he was also acclaimed.

With all members acclaimed to their offices, residents will not have the opportunity to exercise their franchise in this municipal election.

Six trying for council seats in Galway/Cavendish race

Six people are trying for a seat on council in the municipality of Galway/Cavendish just south of Haliburton County in this election. As well, two people are fighting for the job of deputy reeve.

Incumbent reeve Carl Brickman filed nomination papers for this election and was returned to that office unopposed.

In the race for deputy reeve, former council member Jean MacLellan and newcomer Gary Wetzel are vying for support at the polls.

Incumbents Harry Stuart and Harry Platt are trying for another term on council, as is Henry Nokes, who served in 1977 and 1978. Challenging them are newcomers George Hodgson, Anne Stupansky and Wayne Windover.

His opponent, Jean Thomas, quit her position as secretary of the Wilberforce school so that she might have the opportunity to run for office.

Thomas said she felt there was a need for the school trustee to communicate more with the school. If elected, gram which had to be deferred because of lack of funds last year.

The other acclaimed candidate is school board trustee Julie Hunter. This was Hunter's first attempt at running for public office.

Hunter's main concern for her area is the possibility of closure of the school because of declining enrolment.

She explained that the program at the Gooderham school was excellent and also said that when children have to travel to another centre for their education it is not usually possible for them to take advantage of extracurricular activities.

"If there's any way of keeping the school, I'd like to see it done," she said.

Other than the closure issue, Hunter said she was interested in "basic moral principles of education." Although she feels there are some weak areas in the system, Hunter said she couldn't generalize because she was not familiar with the system since it is her first term.

Dysart hopefuls face voters

In fact, he jokingly told the audience, "I hope to be a pall bearer at some of your funerals."

In conclusion, Brohm noted that he had said in 1978 that he would step down after one more term, but that his health "is better than ever, and I have found that I have more to say than ever."

The other challenger for the seat is Patrick Kennedy, a local businessman.

Kennedy said that if he is elected, "a new spirit of enthusiasm and desire will walk with me into the council chamber."

He advocated careful planning and controlled growth, and promised "concern, an ear to listen and an ability to work with a problem to everyone's satisfaction."

"Now is the time for new enthusiasm," Kennedy concluded.

Deputy reeve Harold Bannon, who was acclaimed to the seat, also spoke briefly at the meeting, outlining the progress that had been made over the last two years.

Reeve Murray Fearrey, who was also acclaimed, gave a short summary of the steps that had been taken to improve the municipality's position over the past two years, noting that he is cautiously optimistic about the possibility of securing the DREE funding without which the county cannot compete effectively for industry.

Fearrey noted that he "grow(s) weary" when people keep suggesting programs which the municipality does not have the economic base to support.

Seven vie for seats on Cardiff council

Voters in Cardiff township will go to the polls to choose three councillors from among seven hopefuls, the largest number of candidates for any council in the county. In addition, ballots in Cardiff will carry the names of two men trying for the job of deputy reeve.

Veteran reeve Malcolm McGillivray, a 13-year incumbent and this year's county warden, was returned to his seat uncontested.

In the deputy reeve race, incumbent Mack Peters is being challenged by Jerry Jordan. Jordan ran unsuccessfully for a council seat in the 1978 election.

In the race for council seats, incumbents William Hutton and Elmer Hughey are again seeking a mandate from township voters. The other member of the 1978-80 council, Ross Lawrence, has stepped down.

Making a try for a seat will be Paul Slighte, John Irwin, Fritz Gillick, Clifford Rattle and David Hanna.

Victoria Agnew, incumbent school board trustee for the township and the Improvement District of Bicroft, was acclaimed.

Huskies gain tie and win last week

The Haliburton Huskies improved their standings substantially over the weekend with a tie and a win making them close to 50-50 on the season. After 10 games their record now stands at four wins, one tie and five losses.

Friday the Huskies were at home against Parry Sound, for a game in which the third period proved critical.

At the 9:21 mark of the first period, Gary Harrison put the Huskies on the board with assists from Ron Yake and Mike Rae. Just over a minute later, at 10:46, Brian Lloyd made it 2-0 with help from Rob Abbs and Dean Potter, and the Huskies were off to a solid start. But Parry Sound fought back, narrowing the gap to one at 16:04 and evening things up moments later, at the 16:35 mark.

In the second period, the Huskies again came on strongly to move ahead. At 2:09, Chris Hodgson connected from Dave Nicholls and Potter, and at 7:53, with Parry Sound playing a man short, Darin MacInnis tallied from Hodgson and Nicholls.

Parry Sound was kept off the board for the rest of the period, and the Huskies went into the third hoping to stretch their lead or at least protect it. But it wasn't to be, as Parry Sound began to put the pressure on early and pressed throughout the rest of the period.

At 5:09, with Jim Lee off for high sticking, Parry Sound connected on a power play to narrow the gap to one.

A little over a minute later, at 6:38, they again found the mark to tie the score at four each.

At 12:43, with Parry Sound a man short, the Huskies teamed up with Hodgson and Yake to make it 5-4. But Parry Sound came back to get one more at 14:28 and with no further scoring in the period, the game ended in a 5-5 tie. Sunday afternoon the Huskies hosted Midland before a small crowd and despite a ee as the puck slid through or under the mesh and the game was delayed momentarily until repairs could be completed. Both teams seemed to come alive in the second period and so did the fans, as the Huskies pounded shot after shot into the Midland mesh.

Less than two minutes into the period, Midland made it 2-0 while Andy Salvatori was off for elbowing. At 5:52, Mike Rae got the Huskies first score off the sticks of Chris Hodgson and Dave Nicholls.

Men's recreational hockey begins play

The Haliburton men's recreational hockey league got off to a good start last Monday night with plenty of action in both games.

In the first game of the evening, Curry Motors faced off against Bishop and Wilson and wound up on the winning end of a hard-fought 7-6 contest.

Scoring in the first period for Curry Motors were Tom Curry, Brian Black and Mark Schell. Scoring for Bishop and Wilson were John Wilson and Bob Nichol.

In the second period Curry Motors stretched their lead to 5-2 on goals by Curry and J. Andrews.

Bishop and Wilson came back in the third to make it 5-4 on goals by Greg Bishop made it 6-4 for Curry's before Bob Woodcock got one for the surveyors squad to make it 6-5.

Currys scored once more in the period off the stick of Bill Irvine to make it 7-5. John Wilson connected for the surveyors for the last goal of the game, but it wasn't enough as the motormen came out on top 7-6.

In the second game of the night, Haliburton Lumber and Emmerson Lumber faced off for a battle that proved a little more one-sided.

Dwight Sisson opened the scoring for Haliburton Lumber while Dennis Byers and Frank Powers tallied for Emmerson to make it 2-1 at the end of the first.

The second period belonged to Haliburton Lumber as Sisson got his second and Paul Morrisette also tallied.

Emmerson moved ahead in the third on goals by Powers and Byers but Haliburton Lumber came storming back as Derrell Stamp scored four, Glen Scully scored two and Sheldon Nicholls and Earl Inman each scored one before Powers connected with a final goal for Emmerson.

Final score was Haliburton Lumber 11, Emmerson Lumber 5.

Maple Lake hosts September wedding

St. Peter's Anglican Church, Maple Lake, decorated traditionally for Harvest Thanksgiving was the setting for the September 20 marriage of Susan Jane Redner, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence M. Redner, Maple Lake, to Mr. Robert Bruce Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ronald J. Robinson Sr., Minden.

Reverend David G. Barker officiated at the ceremony. A family friend, Miss Isabelle Gibbs was organist. The attendants were friends of the bride, Sandra Roberts as maid of honour, Janice Jowett and Kelly Walsh as bridesmaids. Best man was Doug Robinson, Bernie Thorpe and Al King were ushers. The wedding dance followed at the Stanhope Community Centre.

Guests were present from Beamsville, Burlington, Guelph, Toronto, Colborne, Courtice, Owen Sound, Alton, Orillia, Stoney Creek, Bracebridge, Baysville, Kinmount, and the Minden, Haliburton area. The couple are now residing in the Minden area.

Extencicare News by Dr. W. O. Anderson

The Canadian economy is in quite a bind, with inflation, the diminishing dollar, taxation, the national debt, foreign borrowings, by all governments, by industry, by private citizens and all the spending by all Canadians outside of Canada, including armed forces, travel by Canadian government members and personnel, and now last but not least Canada's purchases abroad, including crude oil, motor vehicles that cannot be made in Canada and all other items not Canadian made. Labour unrest is increasingly shackling industry - decreased production per man hour, lay-offs, strikes and much sheer lack of on-the-job training. And yet despite this it is incredible, revealed by trade figures, that Canada is still able to compete with the best but there is a lot of room for improvement. Another aggravating feature is the urge, brought about by governments squandering tax dollars, for them when they get into a pinch, to slap a hefty tax on corporations, whose profits represent the very basis of the Canadian system, paid for by the recipients themselves from their life's industry. Governments are taxing the paid-up security away from their pensions or retirement incomes.

Pat Burk is back from another holiday, poised as usual to put her foot down if we do not behave. Her first task was the Tuesday bingo at which Betty Wise was the helper after quite an absence. Ray Smith alternated with Allan Macklin in calling.

A very much needed cheque was donated to the Happy Gang by Irene Pollard. That money we do not have to work for is extra sweet, and like all our other money we make it go to the limit. Thank you kindly Irene!

One thing will be revealed in this evening's budget is that Trudeau has since he took office, been too good to Canadians to be good for Canada. Any devious politician can always win more votes if he is a big spender, but makes the year 80 dollar the same as the 65 quarter.

In our geography lessons when we were youngsters at public school in Ontario we were taught that that huge chunk of Canada between Hudson and James Bays to the west and the St. Lawrence River to the south was the Ungava Peninsula; not it is different, simply Quebec and Labrador. We wonder which politician got those names switched, when and why. While everyone is presently interested in Canada's latest budget, we thought we should comment on a local suggestion of maintaining the Lindsay to Haliburton Canadian National branch line mainly for tourism, and also Hyland Crest is taking on an eerie look this week. Hallowe'en is here and it is obvious as there are witches, scarecrows and black cats seen in various spots in our home.

The week's activities began with a good turnout to fun and fitness. We exercised our bodies to the tune of some lively fiddle music. Later in the day the ladies went to the craft room to work on items in preparation for the Christmas bazaar. Everyone is welcome to attend our annual bazaar on November 19. There will not be a charge at the door, but if you wish to stay for tea and goodies there will be a charge of $1.00. There will be tickets on sale for a lovely hand-made quilt and there will be a display of hand-made gift items for Christmas.

Monday evening, we saw two very interesting films. The Royal took us to the Royal Winter Fair. We were told the history of the Royal and saw how the various animals are prepared for competition. Canada's best in livestock are shown and auctioned each year. Buyers from 45 countries come to the Royal to buy Canadian thoroughbred stock. Our residents particularly enjoyed the horse show.

The River Must Live, showed us how pollution from our factories can totally destroy the rivers and lakes in our country. The rivers in time become little more than an open sewer. Today the pollution level is too high for the rivers to recover. The plants and fish die and the river becomes stagnant. We saw how scientists are working on a method of purifying the polluted water so that it can be consumed.

Tuesday morning, Rev. Everett Wicks of the Minden Gospel Church held service in the Chapel. We were pleased to have our newest resident, Mrs. Frances Krich accompany us on the organ while we sang some gospel hymns. Several residents enjoyed a game of bingo later on in the afternoon. My thanks to members of the housekeeping and nursing staff, who called the numbers in my absence.

In the evening again the residents gathered in the lounge to listen to Mr. Fred Ballard play the organ. It is always a pleasure to welcome Mr. Ballard to our home to entertain us.

Wednesday evening, the students from Haliburton High School and their instructor Mr. Bob Penfold were here to organize games night. Many people enjoyed euchre, crokinole and poker.

Thursday afternoon the Catholic ladies of Haliburton brought lunch for the Thursday tea party. It was a special birthday tea. Sarah Simmons, Berta Dawson, Bob Krich, Tom Harrison, Finnie Jenkins, and Ethel MacDonlad were the guests of honour who celebrated their birthdays during the month of October. The ladies presented them with a beautifully decorated cake and everyone joined together to sing happy birthday.

Friday, we had a strange creature visit our fun and fitness session. I'm not sure what it was, but it resembled King Kong. I've since heard rumours that the creature came up from the laundry. Also at lunch time, a very funny lady appeared in the dining room, strangely enough no one has seen her since.

At sing song, a rather odd gentleman sat in to listen as Grace Coburn led us in the singing of gospel hymns. We enjoyed having Frances Krich accompany us on the piano.

Needless to say it was quite a day. Hallowe'en night, several other little strange-looking characters visited our home for trick or treat. Some of our residents even got in on the action by dressing in costume to greet the children. Everyone had a good time and it was a great way to end the week of activities at Hyland Crest.

Guild News

by Carole McLean

In our current newsletter, encompassing the months of November and December, under the listing of activities for 1980-81, you will notice that from November 4 through January 31 there are no less than four major activities. These are:

"Current Gallery Show" entitled "Drawings", by Joan Leonard and others. This show will consist of all forms and styles of drawings from pencil to pen and ink. As most children who display an interest in the arts begin basically in this medium, I would encourage you to take your family to see this particular show. It will run from November 4 through November 15.

Also following this will be the "Guild Members Best Show and Sale". As Guild members you are hereby invited to select three of your best pieces to be received at the Gallery no later than Saturday, November 15, at the Raily's End Gallery.

Although no awards will be given, a juror's written critique will be given to each artist for each submitted.

If your work is for sale, the usual 25 percent commission will be deducted from all sales.

This is your chance to show off, so we hope that you will take advantage of this opportunity to have your finest work on display in our Gallery.

Last week I mentioned how quickly Christmas is approaching, well it is now official that the "1980 Christmas Exhibition and Sale" is getting itself together. The show will run this year from December 5 - 20.

Our aim is to show the public "High Quality Work" and to encourage new artists and craftspeople. Conditions of the sale: - All work must be original (no kits). The committee reserves the right to reject any work which is not in line with the aims of our Guild "promotion of high quality work". - All work must be for sale. - A 25 percent commission will be deducted from all sales of Guild members work, 33 1/3 percent for non-members. Payment will be made no later than 10 days after show closes. - All articles must be in the Gallery by Tuesday, December 2. However, as it will be held on rotating stock basis, items will be accepted on Tuesday, December 9 and December 16.

As you will have noticed this will be the longest time period we will have held this particular show and sale, so many volunteer hands will be needed. If you would like to help out call Debbie at the Gallery 457-2330.

"Pre-Christmas Workshops"

For many years now Guild members have generously donated their talents toward "Free for members workshops". We have planned three for November. Workshops are free for members, $10.00 for non-members. November 12 - "Beginners Crochet" with Catherine Wilkinson. Bring easy patterns and crochet hooks. Supplies are easily available in local stores. Projects: Santa's face, snowflakes, Christmas stockings (a great gift idea) and many more. Time: 9:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. at the Gallery - bring a lunch.

November 26 - "Wreaths and other decorations" with well-known florist Pat Campbell. Supplies: gather natural materials such as milkweed pods, pinecones, grasses, cornhusks, etc. Time: 9:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. at the Gallery. Bring a lunch.

December 3 - "Apple Dolls" with Donna Brohm, bring a sharp carving tool (exacto knives, etc). Apples will be provided. Time: 9:30 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. at the Gallery - see how this exciting craft is achieved, so come join us.

"Quilting Competition"

The quilting competition will be held January 6 to 31, 1981 at the Raily's End Gallery. For further information call Debbie at 457-2330 or pick up your entry forms there. I'll tell you more in detail next week.

Women's Programs

In coordination with Sir Sandford Fleming College, Women's Programs are sponsoring a two-day workshop to be held at the PineStone Inn entitled: "Insights and Inspirations" - a workshop for women.

"Workshop Leaders and Topics"

Friday evening: Mother and daughter workshop: with Catherine Denholm; science graduate and former mathematics teacher, and Jane Curry; daughter of Catherine is a single parent, teaching English at Central Collegiate in Barrie. She has a B.A. and continues to study in the area of women's programs.

Catherine and Jane will be exploring areas of mother and daughter relationships that contribute to conditioning through education, values and parent models.

Saturday: "Assertiveness Training Workshop" with Blanche Turner: Blanche has worked in the field of human relationships for a number of years and has her B.A. in Psychology. Assertiveness training, is learning to (A) give and receive positive feedback, (B) saying "no" effectively, (C) dealing with anger - giving and receiving negative criticism.

"Your Rights as a Borrower" with Jennifer Silberg: practices family law in Lindsay. The discussion will cover areas of law pertaining to your property rights, rights of support and custody of children. Jennifer will also be discussing marriage contracts and separation agreements.

"Dealing with Stress"

Don't miss this very enlightening weekend at the PineStone Inn.

establishing a maple products project. We, on the other hand, are interested in pelletizing the wood from forest debris, and by the same token begin the job of grooming the bush around Haliburton. Much maple sap, also bush debris could be accumulated along the railway. An odd tourist train could be scheduled in, and a processing depot could be made beside the tracks in the vicinity of the Haliburton Highlands Secondary School. All this besides the custom that would pour in from all sides of the village. There is no doubt but that the present

Liberal government would furnish the necessary funding, and while we are waiting, 'would be' managers, could be learning the various techniques to do this. There are now many pelletizing facilities that operate in the United States to serve as a sort of school if need be. What would appeal more to discriminating tourist but to experience the delight of walking about in a delightfully groomed bush. They would know right away that we were no longer 'back woods'. Opportunity knocks!

guardian ship, a very nice Thanksgiving appeal.

The Rev. Trevor Denny of St. George's Anglican Church, Haliburton, held communion in the lounge of Extendicare Tuesday morning. A large number of us participated.

Bingo in the afternoon was of much interest to many. Betty Wise the sole volunteer and Pat Burk officiating, Ray Smith alternating with Allen Macklin. We had a very good game.

Thursday morning was baking by Lila Simmons, Christina McCrae, Flossie Burk and Hazel Parish making popcorn squares and rice crispies squares. The baking of pull taffy to have some taffy for a coming taffy pull was not the success expected. We may have a taffy pull without the pull taffy sometime soon.

The Druids of early Britain were tree lovers too.

Many of us were lucky enough to get in on the pot luck dinner held by our good benefactors, the senior citizens of Haliburton and area for the noon meal, held in the Dysart Community Centre. Emil Neimann, the president greeted us warmly with all his charm and wit. Ken Stewart, a former United Church pastor, travelled up from Fennell Falls with his wife Greta to attend and in due time, Emil asked him to say the grace. Ninety-six seniors were in attendance and our group from Extendicare, many of whom are not so agile, were given royal attention throughout for which all of us are grateful. Our buffet servings were sumptuous and full of enjoyment, especially the coffee which was good, good, good. Thanks all!

Nancy Picard came alone in the evening, and lacking Peggy Neville chose Jack Pollard and his faithful harmonica as a musical back-up, and we must admit he did himself proud. Nancy with her accordion was gorgeous in musically rolling out the old numbers some modern, some hymns. We thank you kindly Nancy.

Friday morning, Pastor the Rev. Merv Kurtz of the Full Gospel Lighthouse Haliburton led us in our devotion period. His wife Pam and infant daughter Bamby, were our pianists. The theme was taken from Kings 11, ch. 17 wherein it describes how God fulfills his promises even when they seem impossible. The after-service snacks are restored since Pat Burk returned giving us the privilege of renewing our acquaintance with the Kurtz.

No leaves fell on the Happy Gang's melon patch on Hal-lowe'en.

On Sunday Lieut. Mailman of the Haliburton Salvation Army, his officers Martha Sibley and Lillian Hague and guest officer Capt. Cooper of Orillia, paid an unscheduled visit to Extendicare to carry a spiritual message and conduct a sacred sing song of music. Thanks folks!

Harcourt Chapel

One is not aware of the number of cottagers who visit the area and enjoy a weekend at the cottage even this late in the evening. The numerous beacons of light give evidence that there is life in the area.

The summer residence at this time of year is recognized in many of our churches and welcomed. The evening service of October 26 was taken by Mr. Charles Hughes and was well attended. As was announced, Mr. Gary Martin was unable to conduct the service owing to a change in plans.

The Tuesday evening Busy Beaver Boys Club which meets from 6 to 8 p.m. in the Chapel is growing rapidly in number and has reached 32. Sunday evening service

Kinmount Korner

by Millie Moss

St. James Anglican A.C.W. held their annual fall turkey supper at the Kinmount Legion on Saturday, October 25 and at this time would like to thank all who helped in the kitchen, served the tables, sold tickets, washed the mountain of dishes, donated foods, etc. We were certainly busy with between 300 and 350 hungry people to be served. Quite a number of them mentioned that they thoroughly enjoyed the dinner. The weather was bad and we do appreciate your coming out to our dinner. It turned out to be kind of a community affair what with members of other of our churches turning out to help and a big thanks also, to the young ladies who came out and did such a great job of serving tables. A ticket was drawn, on the beautiful handmade quilt, by Father Brooks and the lucky winner was a Mrs. Fraser of Kinmount. The whole day was a complete success.

I was sorry to hear of Ruth Menard being a patient in Minden Red Cross Hospital this past week. I hope you're better soon Ruth. Also on the sick list is Win Wilson, of late, but I'm glad to hear she's coming along.

Bonnie and Jim Walker were guests of ours over the weekend. They also visited with Helen and Alex Graham, Mary L. and John Pyke and Bill, Lorrie and Jason Moss, all of Norland. After the turkey dinner Bill, Lorrie and Jason spent a few hours at our house.

By the way, thanks also, to all you "boys" who helped the ladies at our dinner, Lyle Anderson, Guy Scott, John Lonsdale and Art Owens. To the Kinmount Legion, once again, thank you.

Euchre fans take note! There will be 12 games played, every Wednesday evening beginning at 7:30, November 12. The place will be the Galway Firehall on Galway Road and will run right through the fall and winter months. Your hosts: Ken and Betty Stuart. Everyone is welcome to come out and enjoy the fun. See you there! Bingo games are still going full tilt too, Monday, 7:30 p.m. St. Joseph's Hall in Bobcaygeon, Tuesday, 8 p.m. at the Community Hall in Kirkfield and sponsored by the Lions; Wednesday, 7:30 p.m., at the Fenelon Falls Legion and run by Father Hart, Thursday, 7:30 p.m. the Cobocok Legion; Friday, 7:30 p.m. the Kinmount Legion. There is always something doing.

My 85 year old mother has struck again! She's beat us to it by getting her dark Xmas cake done.

We had a couple of unexpected visitors on Wednesday afternoon. Ida and Clyde Parry of Cobocok dropped by for an hour or so and caught me up on the ladder. I've been wallpapering the hall and I needed the break anyway. Clyde will be going to Toronto shortly to visit with a stepbrother he hasn't seen in 17 years. The brother has moved to Toronto from Newfoundland recently.

Marie and Bill Card of Jackson's Point were guests of Mary L. and John Pyke on Tuesday.

I had a nice chat with Guy Scott at our fall supper and he was telling me about our own Kinmount Orioles, men's baseball team taking the championship this year from the Norland men's team. The cup is at present away, being engraved to honour our boys. Congratulations!

Our deepest sympathy is extended to Doug, all family and friends of Wendy Handley who passed away, this past week, at Sick Children's Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold

Scarlett attended the graduation of their granddaughter Lori Gosselin, of Peterborough recently and were proud to see Lori win the Jeanette Scott Chapter I.O.D.E. Bursary Award of $100. Lori is now attending a four year course at the Laurentian University in Sudbury. Congratulations Lori, your family is very proud of you.

To any of you who may need prescriptions etc. at McArthur's Drugs in Fenelon Falls, please take note. They will be closed from November 8 at 6 p.m. to December 1.

Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Max Bloom of Reid Rd., Kinmount, who celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on November 4.

Win and Bill Wilson spent Thursday night in Toronto arriving back home Friday evening.

Bill and Jason Moss were in Weston Friday night and back home for Saturday.

A phone call from our daughter, Bonnie, in Weston, on Friday evening informed us of the fact they've sold their home and most of their furnishings, will be up to stay with us a few days in November and then will be heading down south where they may settle after a few months trial run.

I was glad to hear Ruth Menard is back home from Minden Red Cross Hospital. Sis Gillis is in Toronto for a few days.

For a tasty side dish, try Sweet and Sour Slaw: 1 head cabbage, 3 tbsp. all purpose flour, 2 tbsp. granulated sugar, 1/2 tsp. dry mustard, 1/2 tsp. salt, pinch of pepper, 1/2 cup cider vinegar, 1 egg, 1 1/2 cups milk. Shred cabbage. It should measure about 8 cups. Place in a big bowl. Measure flour, sugar, mustard, salt and pepper into a saucepan. Blend in vinegar until smooth. Beat egg slightly and stir into flour mixture. Place over medium heat and gradually stir in milk, stirring until mixture is smooth and the thickness of heavy cream, about 5 minutes. Remove from heat and pour over cabbage. Mix well. Cover and refrigerate until cold, at least two hours. Makes 8 cups.

Chatting with Irene

by Irene Moore

After watching the Santa Claus Parade last Sunday, the thought of Christmas became very real. Just think, there are only X number of days left before it is all over. In fact my grandchildren informed me that we have about 50 days left to shop, get the parcels ready, etc.

With the lovely weather we have had in the past week I just can't seem to get in the mood of Christmas shopping. Lucky me for I started early in the summer to pick up a few things but like everyone else, there are always last minute articles to find. Oh well, I still will have 50 days to shop!

While on the subject of shopping - there are three bazaars coming up in town; one at Hyland Crest Home on November 19; one at the United Church Hall on November 21 and one at the Parish Hall on November 28. More details about these in the column next week. Maybe one can buy gifts at these bazaars?

Mr. and Mrs. Bud Stamp took a short holiday last week and toured the central part of Ontario.

Miss Nora's Hairdressing Salon is closed until November 11 as Nora Hogg and Sheila Austen are at present having a holiday at Puera Plata in Dominican Republic.

The lucky people who won Wintario toques last week were, Mike's Milk - Pat Cooper; Mae's Country Mart - E. Bennett; Drug Store - Helen Cox; Stedman's - Bruna Foran; Brown Owl - Cliff Dodd.

Mike Bird, Kevin Newell and Bill Musclow, all of Peterborough spent the weekend at their respective homes.

Never point a finger where you never lent a hand. The Thrift Shop will be open at the Parish Hall on Friday, November 7 from 2 p.m. to 4:30 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Moyer Hewitt of Brampton spent the weekend in Minden.

Winners at the mini card party last week were: cribbage - with perfect score, Luther Wilson; Ethel Leigh. Euchre - lone hands, Ada Turrall; Pearl Cowan, Della Griffin.

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Brownridge of Scarborough spent the weekend at their cottage.

Congratulations to Susan Beers who won a $200 certificate in a draw from the Upholstery Shop and Highland China and Jewellery Store.

Starting out to make money is one of the greatest mistakes in life. Do what you feel you have a flair for doing and if you are good enough at it, the money will come.

"Fish and Rice Casserole" - 1 (2 lb.) haddock fillet, fresh or frozen, 1 cup cooked rice; 1 cup shredded raw carrots; 1 cup chopped celery; 1 medium onion, chopped, 1/2 cup melted margarine; salt and pepper. Line a casserole with aluminum foil, place fresh or thawed fish in bottom, pour melted margarine over fish. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Put rice, carrots, celery and onion over top of fish. Fold aluminum foil over top. (This is to steam the fish). Bake 30 to 40 minutes in a 350 degree oven.

Miss Laura Bird of Toronto spent a few days at her home.

The L.O.B.A. held a card party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Trumbull on October 27. Joyce Hewitt won the prize for cribbage and prize winners for euchre were lone hands - Verna McDon-

It is with deep sympathy that we learned of the passing of Wendy Handley this past week, wife of Douglas Handley, and the daughter of Clifford Suggitt. As I reported last week Wendy has been suffering from Cystic Fibrosis and though she was quite active until recently, she

Farm News and Views

Does it pay a beef cow-calf producer to pinch his bull calves before selling them?

Some producers in this area don't believe it does. They claim that buyers at stocker sales expect to buy bull calves and pay accordingly.

How much will a buyer pay for calves he knows are bulls? At a recent sale we found out. One bunch of good male calves came into the ring weighing about 500 pounds. They were checked and found to still be bulls, and the auctioneer announced this fact. These calves sold for 70 cents per pound.

The lot of heifers from the same farm were the same quality and weighed about the same. They sold for 74 cents.

Now, generally in that sale, steer calves were selling for a 4 or 5 cent premium over heifers. So the farmer who received 70 cents for his bull calves might have received 78 or 79 cents if those calves had been steers. That's about $40 more income for a steer calf than for a bull calf in that stocker sale.

How long does it take to pinch a calf? Most farmers could do it in less than five minutes of total handling time per animal. $40 for five minutes work gives you $480 per hour.

What cow-calf producer can afford to ignore that kind of return for his efforts?

Annual Meeting Results

Frank Smith of #4, Woodville was elected President of the Zone 4 Sheep Association at their recent annual meeting. Gordon Mark, of R.R. #2, Little Britain was re-elected as Secretary-Treasurer.

The Victoria-Peterborough Cream Producers' Association returned Allan Wright, #3, Omemee as Chairman and Brian Starr of #1, Woodville as Secretary-Treasurer for the coming year.

The Victoria County Federation of Agriculture re-elected Ralph Hilder of Canington to a third term as President. Vice Presidents are Oscar Carew, #2, Cameron and Mary Wicks of #2, Bobcaygeon.

Mildred Reeds of Reaboro continues as Secretary-Treasurer. Provincial Directors will be Mary Wicks and Seldon Parker, #1, Oakwood.

certainly was not well. The disease has no known cure, much the same as cancer has no cure, and as a token of sympathy, I know Wendy's family would appreciate your donation to the C.F. fund so someday a cure may be found.

A happy 85th birthday to Mrs. Mary Wilkinson whose birthday is November 5 and the Lillian Tufts who is 83 on November 3. Both ladies are active and well except for the usual aches and pains.

Halloween night was a good evening and not too much destruction.

Eggs are an expensive item yet I hear some kids(?) did manage to carry a supply and pelted other kids, buildings, etc. What a shame when across the world, others are starving to death!

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Batty have had Jack's sister, Laura, visiting from Maple Ridge, British Columbia. Laura was a dinner visitor of Mrs. Mary Limrick on Thursday.

Isn't it a shame that flags are stolen from public places, and someone must constantly replace them?

A "Meet the Candidate" night was held at the Lions Hall on Wednesday evening, with the Bexley Township candidates on the platform. There was a good attendance and a few lively comments and questions. All in all, it was a worthwhile evening and gave ratepayers a chance to decide on their choice of candidate. Now, if only each voter will exercise his right to vote on election day! Your tax money is involved and you personally should take an interest in your community.

I had occasion to visit PineStone Inn one evening last week. The lights shining out across the water at night are lovely. PineStone is Haliburton's answer to Toronto's Royal York! Lovely, charming, and a very "in" place to visit!

I, Mrs. Myrtle Faulkner and Mrs. Nesbitt visited Claire Brooks at Lutterworth Pines on Tuesday night, returning back from PineStone. A few flakes of snow have fallen this past week but not enough to cover the ground. Aren't we lucky, since north of us, there has been snow.

Stanhope Notes

by Alex Stevenson

Stanhope voters will make their choices for the 1981-82 township council, November 10 and the choice should be given serious consideration. Matters such as equalized assessment, lakeshore allowances, road closures plus improvements to some township facilities call for capable and serious consideration. The developing oil supply situation could create problems in operating costs for this municipality in the area of road maintenance, heating, school buses and county levies, etc. As these costs rise, the impact on the taxpayer is going to be more severe and municipal councils are going to need to find ways to minimize the burden on the property owners. The various subsidy sources may be unable to keep pace with the demands which ensue from rising costs resulting from energy problems.

Ontario's library system appears to be in for an onslaught of searching inquiry from the Ministry of Culture and Recreation and also the Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs. At least this is the conclusion one could make after reading a copy of a speech by Honourable Reuben Baetz, Minister of Culture and Recreation, and a study of a paper prepared by the Municipal Budgets and Accounts Branch of the Ministry of Intergovernmental Affairs. Much information is being sought from the municipalities throughout Ontario to be provided in October or November, much of it quite burdensome to research and prepare, and no doubt when it finds a repository in the upper levels of government it will be given month of study culminating in a program to be implemented almost overnight. According to the statement of Mr. Baetz, final implementation of whatever program is arrived at would be set for December 1982. Users of regional libraries such as in Haliburton County would be well advised to seek assurance that the service that has been enjoyed as part of the Lake Ontario Regional Library System will not be placed in jeopardy through a realignment of the Regional Library System. Handicapped people will find an improvement to the entrance to the township office through the creation of an entrance for the use of the handicapped people. The small area is meant only for the handicapped and should not be used as a parking convenience by others.

Regarding the new assessment plan it may be anywhere from one month to three months before property owners receive the new assessment bills and at that time they will know what the effect is going to be on their pocket book. Some time after the bills are sent out, there will be a series of public hearings at which time property owners will have an opportunity to appeal their assessment.

The turnout of interested citizens attending the candidates night said a few things about the people of Stanhope, and to us it was all good. The number of people in the audience, the quality of their questions plus the fact that it was a very disagreeable night for many people to venture out, added to the fact that there was an interesting hockey game convinced us that Stanhope is alive, concerned, vibrant and anxious that all Stanhope people find satisfaction in being part of Stanhope Township.

Wilberforce News

by Winnie Schofield

There was a fairly good turnout for the candidates meeting last Thursday. People seem to be satisfied with the manner in which our municipality is being run and there were no big issues up for discussion. The main topic was the replacement of the bridge on the South Wilberforce road. As this road is not part of the main highway it is considered non-essential by the government and financial assistance has been refused for this purpose. Nevertheless many residents in that area would dearly love to have their bridge back again.

Reeve Keith Tallman answered questions concerning the senior citizen apartment project begun a year ago. Lack of interest shown for this idea caused it to be shelved. Of 100 questionnaires distributed only 13 replies were received.

Questions concerning the role of the Monmouth elementary school in the Haliburton County were answered by our school trustee Mr. Anderson who gave an account of his activities in this field over the years. It is interesting to compare the names of those taking part in the affairs of our municipality with the names of some of our oldest families. Note that Anderson, Coumbs, Dunford, Clark and Finlay were here in the last century. Tallman and Schofield settled in the area before the first World War and Barker (Agnew) arrived shortly after this event. Only Revill and Thomas are new names to our township. One day they too may be part of our history.

The Senior Citizen's Bazaar was a decided success with a complete sell-out of all articles and baking in record time. Tea and coffee were available but we missed the tea table with the cheerful attendance of the Girl Guides and Brownies. There were several draws for well-finished grocery hampers. Kim McCracken, a young visitor from Haliburton, assisted with the draw and was delighted when one of the tickets draw bore her name. First prize went to Irma Dunford, second to Bert Francis, third to Kim, fourth to Mrs. D. E. Finlay. Kath Anderson was the happy winner of two chicken dinners from the B.J. Take-out. Flo Oram won a large quilt while the Afghan went to Mrs. J. Jackson.

It's another boy for Evonne and Charles Hughes. This makes five boys for this lucky family. Best wishes to all.

Cindy and Tracy Hogan were married on Saturday, November 1 at Our Lady of Lourdes Church in Cardiff. The church was filled with happy relatives and friends who gathered for the candle-light service. Mr. Murray McCall of Apsley played the organ. Cindy looking lovely in white gown was attended by matron of honour, sister Karen Scott, and by two bridesmaids dressed in wine velvet. Rick Griffen was best man. Mrs. Gerald Hogan, mother of the groom made all the dresses for the wedding party. A special wedding cake in honour of the occasion had been prepared by Flo Oram. It was three-tiered and decorated with wine coloured roses. A dance in the Wilberforce Memorial Centre was enjoyed by all.

Miss Karen Snell and Mrs. Mary Minto left on the weekend for a week in the Bahamas. This trip was won by Karen at the close of the contest at Minden Furniture last summer.

If anyone wishes to help deliver "Meals on Wheels" or if you wish to receive your meal please contact Jane Graham. Phone 286-2024.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Rivers and sons of Downsview spent the weekend with Mrs. Arnold Coulter.

I had a nice surprise last week. I collected $2.20 from a contest held by Maple Leaf products last summer, so I kept the 20 cents and took the rest and put eight more stitches on the hooked rug at Mae's Country Mart. The money raised by this will be given to the new library to help with the shelving or wherever needed inside the library.

Haliburton County Home Support Services arranged a bus trip to Toronto on October 28. Mrs. Marie Wallace went with the 60 passengers and there was a good representation from Minden. The first stop was at the Parliament Buildings where they had a conducted tour of many committee rooms as guests of our local M.P.P. Mr. John Eakins who also hosted a luncheon for the group. In the afternoon they attended a question and answer period and heard MPP Eakins. With perfect weather the group enjoyed the day very much. Don't forget to vote in your municipal elections.

As members of a free land don't forget on November 11 to send up a prayer in memory of those brave people who kept our land free for us.

Adios and take care now.

Bessie Sedgwick of Feneion Falls called for Ruby Schell in Kinmount recently and they spent the day in Lorneville visiting with old time neighbours, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Taylor and Mrs. Gladys McEachen.

Wednesday past, Nora Crego, Maggie Kylie and Ruby Schell went with Dick and Ruby Holbrook to Lindsay for a few enjoyable hours.

Thursday noon, a pot luck dinner was enjoyed by some 22 or so of our local folk. Those senior citizens are sure busy people!

Sunday, November 9 we ladies will be conducting our own church service for Father Brooks who will be away at that time. Why not take an hour to stop by St. James Anglican in Kinmount, at that time. We may need all the support we can get.

Take care and have a nice day. 488-2399.

WITH TODAY'S VACCINE THERE'S JUST NO EXCUSE FOR GETTING MEASLES

Recently, there's been a serious increase in the number of cases of measles in Ontario. At a time when modern vaccines are so readily available, it simply doesn't make sense for you or your family to contract such diseases. Keep in mind that measles can lead to serious complications such as pneumonia or encephalitis, which is inflammation of the brain.

Women of a childbearing age should also be sure they are immunized against German measles - a disease that can cause serious birth defects.

Of course, you want the peace of mind all year round of knowing you and your family are protected against disease. But what better time to take some positive action than during November, Immunization Awareness Month, by making sure you're immunized.

While you're at it, ask your doctor or local health unit for your copy of the new Ontario immunization record card.

"Evil habits soil a fine dress more than mud; good manners, by their deeds, easily set off a lowly garb."

A well attended bridal shower was held for Teresa Eaton on Monday, October 27 in the Dorset Community Centre. There were over 50 guests and the bride-to-be received many lovely gifts. After Teresa expressed her thanks, refreshments were served.

A fun evening was held at the Dorset Senior Club Wednesday evening when the members all arrived in costume. It started out as a hard times party but some got carried away and came in Halloween costume. Games were the order of the evening and there was much hilarity and everyone was exhausted by laughter by the time the evening was over. Refreshments were served after a short sing song.

Don't forget that Monday the 10th is election day. It is your privilege and duty to cast your vote for whomever you feel will be a capable and conscientious office holder. And may the best man win.

The shopping trip to Barrie on the 13th of November is still on and more people can still take advantage of it. The return fare is $9 and they would like this turned in by November 5. Don Little, the club president will be at Krause's cottage and this can be delivered to him, or you could contact a club member and they would probably take it to the meeting for you.

All the goblins, witches, angels, gypsies and numerous other characters were around tricking or treating on Friday night. How cute the little ones are in their costumes. And we had some grown-ups with the Halloween spirit, one couple dressed as a clown and a rabbit, the clown leading the rabbit on a chain, showed the amount of time and effort that some people go to, to be entertaining. There was a party at the community centre for the youngsters sponsored by the Dorset Lions club with prizes and treats for them all. This is something that the Lions do every year and is very commendable as it keeps the children off the street.

We were sorry to hear that Norman MacKay was taken into Huntsville Hospital on Friday. We hope he is coming along and send our best wishes.

Canadian Union of Public Employees (CUPE) President, Grace Hartman, writer and lecturer Greta Nemiroff, and media consultant Patricia Adams, will be the keynote speakers of Sir Sandford Fleming College's Women's Work 80 Conference November 21 and 22.

Glamorgan Senior Citizens Club met on Wednesday in the fire hall. Being the last meeting in October, the meal took the form of a pot luck dinner which proved to be well-balanced, plentiful and tasty. Following a business meeting the citizens socialized or played cards. The time of the meeting has been changed to the afternoon for the winter months. The club will be having its Christmas dinner November 19. Come and visit our friendly group and have lunch with us at 12:30 every Wednesday in the fire hall.

On Saturday, October 25, a Halloween dance was held in the fire hall with music provided by Jack Gedney. The hall, decorated with blinking Jack-O-Lanterns along with other decorations and interesting costumes, helped create a Halloween atmosphere. Much credit is due those who added to the festivities by coming in costume. A prize was won by Mr. and Mrs. Green from Winona Lake who were dressed as the Jolly Green Giant and Mickey Mouse, both costumes beautifully made. Sandy Barr's prize was for her initiative in dressing as a lady jockey, finding a shirt with starched front, breeches, and high-heeled laced shoes in Barr's store - styles worn many years ago but making a good replica of a jockey's outfit. Ron Barr, too, found an old man's costume of yester-year, in the upstairs of his store. Alma Beck was awarded a prize for originality, dressed as Carol Burnett, the charwoman, complete with mop and pail, but wearing roller skates and doing a good job dancing with them. Karen Dack was winner of a prize for her comic costume, her face mask and red hair really causing laughter. Shelley Hunter portrayed a bunny, really wiggling her little powder-puff tail as she danced. Thanks, masqueraders, for your sportsmanship which added to the evening's enjoyment. This dance was sponsored by the Glamorgan Senior Citizens' Club.

The "Stockade" group of the "Christian Service Brigade" had a happy Halloween party in the Pentecostal Church basement under the leadership of Dale Dovel and Pastor Sauve. The boys and their leaders, in comic costumes, had thrilling experiences in the haunted house and tried hard to eat apples suspended on strings. All in all it was a joyous party.

The children of Gooderham Elementary School enjoyed a Halloween party on Thursday afternoon. Two teachers, dressed as witches, with their broomsticks arrived from the direction of the school hill. They tapped at the windows, causing some excitement for the children. Later a third witch joined them. All had fun making and drinking a witch's brew. Previously the children had interesting and educational trips. The grades 3 and 4 with their teacher, Mrs. Miller, visited Frank Dewey to see how his bees were being prepared for winter. Another trip took them to Haliburton where all grades visited the museum mobile to learn about Arctic life. To finish this trip the grades 3 and 4 visited the Echo office since they are working on their own newspaper. Grades one and two went to Linkert's bakery, learning how their bakery products are made but also enjoying the free cookies. These trips will make an impression which will remain and add to their store of knowledge, learned in such a pleasant way.

A bridal shower will be held on November 8 at 7:30 p.m. in the Pentecostal Church in honour of Janice Simmons. Janice, the daughter of Donna and Doug Simmons, spent her early years in Gooderham and will be married in Thunder Bay.

Mrs. Theresa Peacock has returned from visiting Mrs. Fay Snyder and friends at Bowmanville.

Mr. and Mrs. Murray Richardson (nee Caroline McCrea) visited her great aunt, Mrs. Susie Madill who returned to Oshawa with them. She spent a few days there, being present for the christening of 5-month old Wesley Richardson.

Many of our summer residents have left for the sunny south or points south of us.

SSFC forestry students work at Gogama camp

Over 190 second and third year forestry students from Sir Sandford Fleming College's Frost Campus in Lindsay recently conducted a complete short wood logging operation, as well as a tree cleaning exercise, at the E.B. Eddy Forest Products camp 303 near Gogama, Ontario.

Designed to expose students to the practical problems and conditions encountered in a major tree harvesting operation, the Gogama camp, located approximately 160 kilometres northwest of Sudbury, provides students with an opportunity to fell, limb and choke trees for use in mills, operate and maintain skidders, chainsaws, brushsaws and other equipment used in a lumber camp, cut logging roads, and regenerate and develop forests through the proper cleaning of young stands.

This was the eighth year the college operated the camp. Most logs harvested were cut into 16 ft. saw logs and eight foot studs. The remainder were cut into eight foot pulp wood. Younger stands thinned in the silviculture exercise were cut according to Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources specifications.

The 180 second year and 12 third year students attended the camp in three two-week sessions, and cut up to 1,300 cunits (or about 13,000 trees) of jackpine within a 50-acre area by the close of the exercise October 18.

Students worked in teams of six, with each group supervised by a third-year student.

"The Gogama camp is the only college-run logging operation on this scale. The exercise gives students a chance to be exposed to the problems encountered every day in production," Sir Sandford Forestry teacher J. R. (Bob) Mackey says.

In keeping with the realistic approach, students worked a six-day week, from 8:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m., with a half-hour break for lunch. Production meetings were held in the evenings for the third year supervisors, while other work crews were involved in chain and brush saw maintenance and the cleaning of the lumber camp's cookery and dining hall.

The wood harvested during the exercise was purchased by the E.B. Eddy Company to help defray the costs of the operation.

Although instruction and production are an important part of the annual project, safety is emphasized most, Mr. Mackey says.

The annual fall camp is operated with the sanction of Local 2693 of the Lumber and Sawmill Workers' Union, and the co-operation of the company and the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources branch in Gogama.

The heavy equipment used in this year's camp included seven skidders and one bulldozer, rented from Harrison Equipment and Supply in Sudbury.

There are 550 first year students at the College's Frost Campus, all of whom participate in a common first year program which includes courses in Forestry, Resources Drilling, Fish and Wildlife, Cartography, Farm Management, General Science, Geology and Heavy Equipment. There are 952 students attending the Frost Campus.

County of Victoria

NOTICE PROPOSED MODIFICATIONS TO THE COUNTY OF VICTORIA OFFICIAL PLAN FOR THE SHORELINE DESIGNATION

HISTORY

The County of Victoria has had lengthy discussions with the Province of Ontario concerning permanent residential development in shoreline areas. It has been the County's position throughout that it was poor planning to encourage Municipalities to adopt comprehensive zoning by-laws which zoned much of their shoreline as strictly seasonal when many of them were not interested in the enforcement of such By-laws. The Province, on the other hand, felt that the majority of the shoreline areas should be zoned Seasonal Residential to protect their financial position.

The Minister of Housing, in approving the County Official Plan, deferred those sections dealing with permanent residential use in shoreline areas. After lengthy debate, technical agreement was reached as to alternate wording. The following is a brief outline of how the implementing zoning by-laws would be affected.

Nature of Proposed Changes

It is being suggested that wording be added to Section 9.5 of the Official Plan to provide for three separate residential zones in the shoreline designation.

The first would be a residential zone that permits both seasonal and permanent residential uses. This zone, could, with local approval, be used for all lots that front onto an assumed and publicly maintained road.

There are, however, numerous cottage properties which do not front onto an assumed public road which is maintained year-round. For the purpose of the Official Plan, these lots are considered to have 'limited Municipal Services' or be 'Limited Service Lots'. The percentage of lots of this nature varies from one Municipality to another. The limited service reference would be used to inform land owners and prospective purchasers of the present road status. (It should in no way be interpreted as an attempt to reduce the services that are provided but rather a recognition of existing levels of service.). It is suggested that two separate zones could be used in limited service areas.

The first zone that could be used along a private road would be a 'limited service residential' zone. This zone would permit both seasonal and permanent uses. Specific criteria outlines when the limited service residential zoning may be used. The key element, however, is that in the local Councils' opinion, there must be a meaningful number of permanent dwellings which already exist along a common access route.

The second zone which may be considered for properties fronting onto a private road is a strictly seasonal zone. This zone could be used by local Municipalities where there are no permanent residential dwellings located along the private road or where the Council did not wish to see further conversions to permanent use take place without greater control. Under certain circumstances, local Councils might wish to consider allowing seasonal residential dwellings initially zoned limited service seasonal to convert to year-round use along such private roads. The Official Plan would contain specific policies to allow local Councils to consider rezoning to 'limited service residential' which would permit permanent development to take place. Subject to the following criteria;

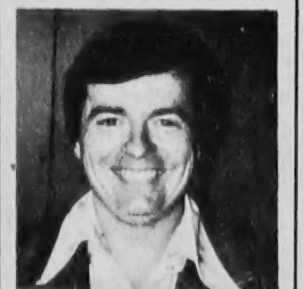

1. A satisfactory report from the Health Unit,
2. A satisfactory report from the Building Inspector as to the condition of the building for year round use, and finally,
3. The owner is agreeable to having wording registered or deposited on title indicating to subsequent purchasers the level of service that exists.

In summary, it is felt that the proposed policies go a long way towards achieving the goals and objectives of the County of Victoria Official Plan. It is hoped that this approach will be satisfactory to all the parties involved and lead to the resolution of this major issue.

If these policies are found acceptable, consideration will be given to their inclusion in the Somerville-Bexley Official Plan and the Lindsay-Ops Township Official Plan.

Further information and copies of the proposed wording may be obtained by contacting The County of Victoria Planning Department (705-324-6183), P.O. Box 658, 42 Victoria Avenue North, Lindsay, Ontario, K9V 4S5.

From the Chamber

accomplished they will attempt to develop strategies to resolve the problems. There are a number of possibilities but the end result should provide our young people with more options and a clearer view of what they involve.

The committee is chaired by Kim Emmerson of Emmerson Lumber and we expect he would be glad to hear from anyone that wishes to provide some input to their deliberations.

The Budget

One important factor of the Federal budget just brought forward that has been completely overshadowed by the energy policies was the extension of the "Small Business Development Bond" program to the end of March, 1981. This legislation was introduced a year ago in the Conservative budget but because that government was defeated it was never passed into legislation until the passing of this budget last week. The original intention was to provide a year in which the program could operate and the deadline was set for the end of 1980. Small businesses and the banks were assured that the Liberal government would keep this item in their budget but businessmen petitioned to have it extended a further year to allow time to use the plan to full advantage. With the extension of three months it now makes the projects that are already underway or in the final stages of planning feasible under the plan, but it is doubtful a completely new project could be put into the works in time.

A Small Business Development Bond allows an incorporated business to "borrow" money from their bank in the form of a bond. The interest then becomes a dividend on which the bank pays no taxes. Since banks pay tax at the rate of 50% they can therefore reduce their interest by up to half to maintain the same return. The business on the other hand pays the interest or dividends with after tax dollars so therefore does not get the full benefit. The Ministry of Industry and Tourism T.R.I.P. program can be applied against this program to provide a 5% interest subsidy which reduces after five years. The S.B.D.B. is also only applicable for five years so that if the expansion plan that is proposed can be expected to be profitable enough to carry a higher interest rate after this initial period the plans can certainly be a major factor in getting a project underway. It is unfortunate they are allowing so little time.

That Weather!

With a beautiful late fall weekend kicking off the deer season we are reminded that this has been the first weekend since August 2 that it did not rain on the weekend - and then it rained Friday night just so we don't get off scott free.

Don't Forget

Many parts of our county unfortunately have little or no choices to make in this municipal election, but for those of you that do, may we remind you one more time -- "If You Don't Vote -- You Don't Count."

County council meets

shoreline road allowance which abuts Parts 31 and 32, on Plan RD123 in the Township of Lutterworth, was passed.

Deputy Reeve Elgin Stouffer requested that members of County Council encourage wood lot control and planned harvesting of trees on private lands for improved economy and future production.

Council agreed to confirm that the use of MLS listings by the A, H and M group executive has received permission from the sellers and the Haliburton and District Real Estate Board; and clarification will be sought from the Ministry of Consumer and Commercial Relations that this is in fact an improper use of MLS listings for the purpose of comparing assessment and taxation.
